EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

1. Introduction

Irish society is quite homogeneous. According to the 2016 census,¹ of a population of just under 4.8 million, 78.3 % are Roman Catholic, 9.8 % are non-religious (an increase of 73.6 % from 2011), and the remainder are of various other religions. 82.2 % of the population describe themselves as 'White Irish' and 0.7 % as Irish Travellers.² 57 850 people identify as 'Black African' or 'Black Irish', with 9.5 % belonging to 'Any other White background'. 643 131 people, approximately 13.5 % of the population, recorded having a disability. A total of 6 034 same-sex couples live in Ireland. Non-Irish nationals number 535 475 (11.6 % of the population), with UK citizens and nationals of other EU countries (Polish, Lithuanian, Romanian and Latvian) comprising the top five nationality groups.

Ireland's anti-discrimination laws were expanded significantly in the late 1990s. The Employment Equality Act 1998³ and the Equal Status Act 2000⁴ provided for nine discriminatory grounds and established a national equality body, as well as a dedicated forum for hearing anti-discrimination complaints, the Equality Tribunal. From 2008 successive national budgets severely curtailed funding for equality infrastructure. In November 2014, the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission (IHREC)⁵ was established as Ireland's national equality body. The body is equipped with equivalent powers to its predecessor, and its funding position has improved. The Equality Tribunal was subsumed, along with several employment rights bodies, into the Workplace Relations Commission (WRC) in 2015.⁶

There were no amendments to anti-discrimination legislation in 2020 and relatively few developments in case law. The High Court addressed the relationship between the reasonable accommodation duty and an occupational requirement for people employed in certain sectors, including the prison service.⁷ It reversed a finding to the effect that the prison service is exempt from the reasonable accommodation duty in circumstances where an employee is not capable of carrying out the full range of functions required of prison officers (see Chapter 12.2). The Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission provided legal representation to two complainants, who successfully argued that they had been discriminated against when their applications to join An Garda Síochána (the police force) were not processed because of their age.⁸ The legislation set 35 as the upper age limit for entry into the force as a trainee. In upholding the complaints, the WRC effectively disapplied national law, which is under review by an expert group that will report to the Garda Commissioner in 2021 (see Chapter 12.2).

¹ See <http://www.cso.ie/en/census/census2016reports/>. The census due to take place in 2021 has been postponed for one year because of the COVID-19 pandemic.

2. Main legislation

The Irish Constitution enshrines a guarantee of equality before the law with no specified discriminatory grounds. It is invoked relatively infrequently.⁹

Irish anti-discrimination legislation consists of the Employment Equality Acts 1998-2015, which govern employment and occupation, and the Equal Status Acts 2000-2018, which cover goods, services, housing/accommodation and education. The Pensions Acts 1990-2018¹⁰ apply to occupational pension schemes. Each law covers the grounds of gender, age, race, religion, family status,¹¹ disability, civil status, sexual orientation and membership of the Traveller community. A further 'housing assistance' ground was added to the Equal Status Acts in 2015 to prohibit discrimination in providing rental accommodation to people who receive social protection benefits such as housing assistance payments.¹²

Other laws also contain provisions prohibiting discrimination: the Unfair Dismissals Acts 1977-2015,¹³ the Prohibition of Incitement to Hatred Act 1989,¹⁴ which criminalises hate speech, and the Intoxicating Liquor Act 2003,¹⁵ Section 19 of which provides for the enforcement of discrimination law in the context of premises licensed for the sale of alcohol.

Irish anti-discrimination legislation goes beyond the EU equality directives, in that the personal scope of the Equal Status Acts 2000-2018 prohibits discrimination not just on grounds of race and gender, but also on the grounds of age, civil status, disability, family status, religion, sexual orientation, membership of the Traveller community and receipt of housing assistance. Nationality-based discrimination is also expressly prohibited under the 'race' ground. The definition of disability is broader than in EU law, and reasonable accommodation on that ground must be provided to people accessing goods and services. There is a substantial body of case law on all discriminatory grounds, the bulk of which comprises decisions of the WRC (formerly the Equality Tribunal) and the Labour Court.¹⁶ Studies suggest that under-reporting of discrimination and failure to take action in response to perceived discrimination are significant problems.¹⁷

Ireland has ratified the main Council of Europe human rights instruments, including the Revised European Social Charter, but not Protocol 12 to the European Convention on Human Rights. It has also ratified most of the primary United Nations instruments, with ratification of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities in 2018. Ireland is a dualist state, meaning that for international law to be enforceable in the Irish legal system, it must be transposed by means of legislation into the national legal order. The ¹¹ The family status ground covers people in defined relationships of dependency, such as parents of children and carers of people with disabilities (Section 2(1) ESA). It would include same-sex families, but it is not apparent from the case law whether any such families have invoked the ground.

main international convention that has been transposed into Irish law is the European Convention on Human Rights, which was incorporated by means of the European Convention on Human Rights Act 2003.¹⁸

3. Main principles and definitions

Direct discrimination is defined in the anti-discrimination laws as treating one person less favourably than another person is treated, has been treated or would be treated in a similar situation on any of the discriminatory grounds. This prohibition includes discrimination by association, and discrimination on a discriminatory ground that exists, existed but no longer exists, may exist in the future, or is imputed to the person concerned. Indirect discrimination is defined as occurring where an apparently neutral provision would put a person covered by one of the discriminatory grounds at a particular disadvantage compared with other persons. This differential impact may be permitted where it can be objectively justified by a legitimate aim, and the means of achieving that aim are appropriate and necessary. Harassment is defined as any unwanted conduct related to a discriminatory ground, which has the purpose or effect of violating a person's dignity and creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment for the person. This conduct can include acts, requests, spoken words, gestures or the production, display or circulation of written words, pictures or other material. Victimisation covers any person who claims discrimination, instigates proceedings, supports a complainant, acts as a comparator or a witness to an incident that has given rise to a complaint, opposes discrimination by lawful means or gives notice of an intention to do any of the above, and who, as a result, suffers dismissal or adverse treatment. Instructions to discriminate are expressly prohibited under the Employment Equality Acts and are covered to an extent under the Equal Status Acts by the prohibition of the procurement of discrimination.

The Employment Equality Acts 1998-2015 provide that, where a person who has a disability can perform the duties of the post with or without the assistance of 'appropriate measures', they will be deemed competent under the Acts. The employer has an obligation to take appropriate measures to enable a person with a disability to have access to employment, to participate or advance in employment and to undergo training unless such measures would impose a disproportionate burden on the employer. To determine what amounts to a disproportionate burden, account must be taken of the costs of the measure in question, the scale and financial resources of the employer, and the possibility of obtaining public funding or other assistance. Under the Equal Status Acts 2000-2018, a provider of goods or services must do all that is reasonable to accommodate the needs of a person with a disability by providing special treatment or facilities without which it would be impossible or unduly difficult for the person to avail themselves of the goods or services in question. This duty is subject to a nominal cost ceiling, which varies according to the scale of the organisation and the resources available to it.

The Employment Equality Acts contain a number of exceptions to the principle of non-discrimination, which does not apply to access to employment in another person's home for the provision of personal services. There are exceptions where the characteristic in question is a genuine and determining occupational requirement for the post concerned and the objective is legitimate, and the requirement proportionate. There are also exceptions relating to the grounds of age and disability in occupational pensions and remuneration, respectively, in respect of someone with a restricted working capacity. There is an exception relating to discrimination in employment for the purposes of maintaining the religious ethos of an institution, provided that this is 'legitimate' and 'proportionate' and is limited so that it could not be used to justify discrimination on another ground. Exceptions also apply in respect of certain forms of employment, such as the armed forces, the Garda Síochána (police) and the emergency services. With regard to the Equal Status Acts there are a number of exceptions and exemptions to the non-discrimination rule.

¹⁸ European Convention on Human Rights Act 2003, 30 June 2003, <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/eli/2003/act/20/enacted/en/print.html>.

Differences of treatment are permissible in respect of annuities, pensions and insurance policies where there is actuarial evidence to show that the difference is reasonable. There are exceptions to the non-discrimination norm for the purposes of organising sporting events, for authenticity purposes for a dramatic performance or other entertainment, or for the provision of services for religious purposes. There is an exception that discrimination in relation to the provision of goods or services is not actionable in circumstances that would lead a reasonable person to believe there is a substantial risk of criminal or disorderly conduct. The Equal Status Acts also contains a number of exceptions in respect of education on the grounds of age, gender, religious ethos and disability.

Multiple discrimination is not explicitly prohibited.

4. Material scope

The Employment Equality Acts 1998-2015 apply to the field of employment and vocational training and do not distinguish between public and private sector employees. Discrimination is prohibited in access to employment, conditions of employment (including pay), training and experience for or in relation to employment, promotion, re-grading or classification of posts, and advertisements. Employment agencies and agency workers are also covered.

The Equal Status Acts 2000-2018 prohibit discrimination in relation to goods and services supplied by the private and public sectors, including education and housing/accommodation. Social protection and social advantages are not explicitly mentioned but are covered according to case law.¹⁹ The main compliance issue relates to a provision that exempts any action required by law from scrutiny.²⁰

5. Enforcing the law

Complaints under the Employment Equality Acts 1998-2015, the Equal Status Acts 2000-2018 and the Pensions Acts 1990-2018 may be brought before the Workplace Relations Commission (WRC). The WRC assumes an investigative role in the hearing of complaints, complainants may represent themselves, costs may not be awarded against either party, and the procedure is informal. The option of mediation is available. A mediated settlement agreed by the parties is legally binding and its terms can be enforced at the Circuit Court. WRC employment determinations may be appealed to the Labour Court, while equal status appeals are heard by the Circuit Court. Labour Court and Circuit Court determinations can be appealed on a point of law to the High Court.

Claims are brought before the relevant body by way of application using online forms. Equal Status Acts complaints are subject to an additional requirement: the service provider must be notified in writing of the incident and of the complainant's intention to seek redress. Hearings before the WRC are held in private. The decisions of the WRC are available for public inspection, since they are published on its website. Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, considerably fewer WRC hearings were conducted in 2020 than in 2019, leading to a 46 % decrease in the number of decisions delivered.²¹

Complaints about discrimination involving licensed premises (i.e. pubs etc.) are heard by the District Court, rather than the WRC. The major impact of this change, effected in 2003, has been increased costs and procedural complexity for complainants. Members of the Traveller community have been particularly affected, according to the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance (Chapter 6.1(b)).

Organisations may represent an individual complainant at the WRC and the Labour Court if authorised to do so by the complainant, but not before the Circuit Court or the High Court. Trade unions regularly represent their members. Organisations are not permitted to bring a complaint, with the exception of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission (IHREC). IHREC enjoys legal standing to bring complaints to the WRC relating to patterns of discrimination, discriminatory advertising or the contents of a collective agreement. It can also provide an individual complainant with legal representation and/or legal advice. IHREC granted legal assistance to 77 new applicants in 2020. Of these applications, 22 were for legal advice only, with the remaining 55 applicants also receiving legal representation. At the beginning of 2020, the Commission was providing legal advice and representation to 53 individuals, and legal advice only to a further 86 people (see Chapter 7).

The legislation provides for a shift in the burden of proof in non-discrimination cases where the facts established suggest that there is a prima facie case of discrimination. The use of statistics is permitted, but is not required, in order to raise a prima facie case.

The Employment Equality Acts 1998-2015 provide for a broad range of remedies: compensation, orders for employers to take specific courses of action, reinstatement and re-engagement. All employment contracts are deemed to have an equality clause, which transforms any provisions of the contract that would otherwise give rise to unlawful discrimination. All discriminatory provisions in collective agreements are deemed null and void, and it is not possible to contract out of the terms of the equality legislation. There are maximum limits on financial awards. In the context of employment, those limits are a maximum of two years' pay, and EUR 13 000 where the complainant was not an employee of the respondent, with equal pay arrears going back three years. Compensation up to a ceiling of EUR 15 000, is provided for under the Equal Status Acts 2000-2018. Service providers can also be directed to take specific courses of action. Under both sets of Acts, the financial sanctions are much lighter than those provided for in the case of gender discrimination. This suggests that the sanctions available for the non-gender grounds may not be effective, proportionate or dissuasive. Injunctive relief is not available before the Workplace Relations Commission or the Labour Court; such action may only be taken by the ordinary courts.

A binding 3 % quota applies to the employment of people with disabilities in the civil and public service. The Government has undertaken to progressively increase the statutory target towards 6 % by 2024.²² The Higher Education Authority oversees a range of measures that provide support to distinct categories of students covered by the discriminatory grounds, including mature students and students with disabilities.²³ Additional English language support is provided to migrant children in schools.

IHREC is the primary vehicle through which dialogue and consultation with NGOs and the social partners takes place. It is equipped with a range of relevant statutory powers and functions, including the power to establish advisory committees and to draft codes of practice.

6. Equality bodies

The Equality Authority was merged with the Irish Human Rights Commission to form the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission (IHREC).²⁴ IHREC, which was established on 1 November 2014, is an independent body mandated to work towards the elimination of discrimination, promote equality of opportunity, provide information to the public on anti-discrimination law, and review various legislative enactments including the primary anti-discrimination laws. It fulfils these functions by, inter alia, conducting research, raising awareness, reviewing legislation and drafting statutory codes of practice. Two codes of practice drafted by IHREC were awaiting ministerial approval as at the end of December 2020. The first is on equal pay and the second is a revised code on sexual harassment and harassment (on the nine discrimination grounds) at work. IHREC has the power to instigate litigation in its own name and to assist litigants. It is authorised to conduct inquiries and to carry out equality reviews and equality audits. IHREC issued several invitations to conduct equality audits in 2019, following equality reviews undertaken the previous year. The audits are aimed at securing the cessation of less favourable treatment on the race ground in access to homeless and social housing services, the extension of the practice of non-supervision of urine samples to addiction treatment services nationwide, and the provision of interpreting services for people accessing primary healthcare. The outcomes of these measures will be published in 2021. The Commission has the full range of competences set out under Article 13 of the Racial Equality Directive. The Department of Children, Equality, Disability, Integration and Youth, under the direction of the minister, funds IHREC, which reports to the Oireachtas (the Irish Parliament).

7. Key issues

One interesting innovation lies in Section 42 of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission Act 2014, which introduces a positive duty on public bodies to have due regard to human rights and equality in carrying out their functions. IHREC will assist public bodies to comply with the positive duty; it has produced a preliminary guide and is empowered to draw up codes of practice. It has collaborated with numerous public sector bodies on pilot initiatives, which informed a guidance document published in 2019.

Flexible sanctions are available, which enable remedies to be tailored to particular circumstances and which can also generate significant effects beyond the immediate case. However, the limits set on compensation arguably undermine the requirement that sanctions be 'effective, proportionate and dissuasive'. It is uncertain whether the Equal Status Acts adequately cover social protection and social advantages, due in part to the broad exemption for measures that are required by law. The pursuit of complaints about discrimination in accessing goods and services is hampered by some procedural obstacles. Potential problems with the Employment Equality Acts include a narrow definition of vocational training, failure to cover beliefs that are not religious in nature, and a provision that enables lower rates of remuneration to be paid to persons with disabilities.

INTRODUCTION

The national legal system

The basic law of Ireland is the Constitution, Bunreacht na hÉireann, of 1937. It establishes the State and its institutions, sets out the fundamental principles guiding the governance of the State and contains an entrenched bill of rights.²⁵ The Constitution takes precedence over all other sources of law, subject to Article 29.4.6°, which ensures that nothing in the Constitution can invalidate laws enacted, acts done or measures adopted by the State where these are necessitated by membership of the EU. Article 15.4 prohibits the Oireachtas (Parliament) from enacting laws that conflict with the Constitution, including its human rights guarantees, while Article 34.3.2° vests in the High Court, Court of Appeal and Supreme Court the express power of judicial review of legislation.

The Constitution provides that the sole law-making body in the State is the Oireachtas.²⁶ Legislation must be passed by both houses of the Oireachtas and is then signed into law by the President. Legislation is the most significant source of non-discrimination measures.

Ireland is a dualist state; ratification of an international treaty does not automatically result in its provisions becoming part of the internal legal system.²⁷ In order to become enforceable under domestic law, a treaty must be incorporated either through an Act of the Oireachtas or by an amendment to the Constitution. The European Convention on Human Rights Act 2003 gave further effect to the provisions of the Convention under Irish law.²⁸ It places obligations on organs of the State to comply with the Convention and provides remedies for individuals whose rights have been infringed.

1 GENERAL LEGAL FRAMEWORK

Constitutional provisions on protection against discrimination and the promotion of equality

The Constitution of Ireland includes the following articles dealing with non-discrimination:

General clause

Article 40.1 provides: 'All citizens shall, as human persons, be held equal before the law. This shall not be held to mean that the State shall not in its enactments have due regard to differences of capacity, physical and moral, and social function.'

The grounds covered implicitly by this provision include sex/gender, race, language, religious or political opinions, age, marital status, pedigree, and disability.³⁴

This provision appears to apply to all areas covered by the directives. Its material scope is unclear but is broader than those of the directives, in that it extends to access to goods and services on several grounds.

Specific clauses

Article 44.2.3° applies to the religion ground and provides that 'the State shall not impose any disabilities or make any discrimination on the ground of religious profession, belief or status.' With regard to education, the Constitution further provides, under Article 44.2.4°, that 'State aid for schools shall not discriminate between schools under the management of different religious denominations, nor be such as to affect prejudicially the right of any child to attend a school receiving public money without attending religious instruction at that school.'

Article 40.6.2° requires that laws regulating the formation of associations and unions and the right of free assembly shall 'contain no political, religious or class discrimination.'

These provisions are directly applicable.

These provisions cannot be enforced against private individuals (although they can be enforced against the state). Although the matter requires further judicial interpretation, it seems that the general equality clause cannot be enforced against private actors.³⁵ Article 44.2.3° cannot be enforced against private actors.³⁶ The other two provisions listed above explicitly apply only to state activities.

2 THE DEFINITION OF DISCRIMINATION

2.1 Grounds of unlawful discrimination explicitly covered

The following grounds of discrimination are explicitly prohibited in the main legislation transposing and implementing the two EU anti-discrimination directives (as listed in the Introduction above): age, civil status, disability, family status, gender, race, religion, sexual orientation, membership of the Traveller community and receipt of housing assistance.³⁷ It appears that, while religious beliefs are covered, the provisions do not adequately prohibit discrimination on the grounds of religion or belief.

2.1.1 Definition of the grounds of unlawful discrimination within the directives

a) Racial or ethnic origin

The race ground under both the Employment Equality Acts (EEA) and the Equal Status Acts (ESA) covers people who are of different 'race, colour, nationality or ethnic or national origin'.³⁸ None of these concepts are defined.

According to case law, 'national origin' is 'acquired by a person at the time of birth and connects that person with one or more groups of people who can be described as a "nation"'.³⁹ 'Nationality' is in effect equated with citizenship.⁴⁰

Racial origin

Case law has not considered the meaning of 'race' as such.⁴¹

Ethnic origin

Under EEA and ESA, the race ground prohibits discrimination against people who are inter alia of a different 'ethnic or national origin'. According to the High Court, 'ethnic origin' under ESA will usually refer to an immutable characteristic over which an individual has no control, while it has been recognised there are 'instances where an individual belonging to ³⁷ With effect from 1 January 2016, 'housing assistance' may be invoked as a discriminatory ground but only in the context of accommodation, which is covered by the Equal Status Acts. People in receipt of rent supplement, housing assistance payments or other social welfare payments cannot be discriminated against in relation to the provision of accommodation or related services or amenities. Landlords, letting agents and property advertisers are also prohibited from publishing or displaying advertisements which indicate an intention to discriminate on the housing assistance ground: Ireland, Equality (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 2015, 10 December 2015, <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/eli/2015/act/43/enacted/en/html>.

one nationality or ethnic group might elect to adhere to another.⁴² The Court approved of the definition of 'ethnic group' set out by the British House of Lords in Mandla v Dowell-Lee.⁴³ In that case, Lord Fraser found that such a group must regard itself and be regarded by others as a distinct community by virtue of certain characteristics: '(1) a long shared history, of which the group is conscious as distinguishing it from other groups, and the memory of which it keeps alive (2) a cultural tradition of its own, including family and social customs and manners, often but not necessarily associated with religious observance. In addition to those two essential characteristics the following characteristics are, in my opinion, relevant: (3) either a common geographical origin, or descent from a small number of common ancestors (4) a common language, not necessarily peculiar to the group (5) a common literature peculiar to the group (6) a common religion different from that of neighbouring groups or from the general community surrounding it (7) being a minority or being an oppressed or a dominant group within a larger community'.⁴⁴ Applying this formula, the High Court concluded that, for the purposes of ESA, farmers are an occupational group, not an ethnic group. The complainant could not, therefore, base a discrimination complaint on his status as a member of the farming community.⁴⁵

Membership of the Traveller community is a separate ground. The 'Traveller community' is defined as 'the community of people commonly known and identified (both by themselves and others) as people with a shared history, culture and traditions including, historically a nomadic way of life on the island of Ireland'.⁴⁶ On 1 March 2017 the Taoiseach (Prime Minister) announced that the state formally recognised Travellers as an ethnic group.⁴⁷ According to the Taoiseach's statement, the policy change would 'create no new individual, constitutional or financial rights'.⁴⁸ Nonetheless, this development has affected how existing provisions are interpreted. In 2018, the Workplace Relations Commission (the first instance forum for complaints under EEA and ESA) confirmed for the first time that Travellers were covered by the race ground as well as the Traveller community ground under EEA and ESA.⁴⁹ The primary ESA case to reach the superior courts on appeal proceeded exclusively as a Traveller-ground case.⁵⁰ The Court omitted to consider the ⁴⁸ The High Court considered the legal status of the policy change in a 2017 case. Justice Eagar held that the Taoiseach's statement had 'no legal effect' and declined an application to amend the reliefs sought in a judicial review application to include, inter alia, discrimination on the basis of ethnicity. The applicant Traveller family had sought a series of orders directing the respondent county council to fulfil the duties imposed on it under statute to provide accommodation. According to the Court, while it has been open to the applicants to ground their application on ethnic bias, they did not take that opportunity when applying for leave to apply for judicial review; the amendments sought would amount to an entirely different case to that which had been made by the applicants to date: Mongans v Clare County Council [2017] IEHC 709, 27 October 2017, https://www.courts.ie/view/judgments/d491a87c-1b12-4e0f-a68c-fb259ee203d5/b1329117-c47c-407a-b75c-cac9aa2cded2/2017_IEHC_709_1.pdf/pdf.

application of the Racial Equality Directive, even though the amicus submission of the Equality Authority argued that the Directive should be deployed in interpreting the ESA provisions on indirect discrimination as applying to the Traveller ground.⁵¹ It should now be clear that the Directive is applicable in all cases involving Travellers and falling within its material scope.

b) Religion or belief

Under ESA and EEA, the 'religion ground' applies as between people where 'one has a different religious belief from the other, or that one has a religious belief and the other has not'.⁵² 'Religious belief' is defined as 'religious background or outlook'.⁵³ Religious background has been interpreted as affording protection to members of 'a specific faith', while the term 'outlook' covers 'specific attitudes which go with a religious belief'.⁵⁴ Being a 'spiritual guide' does not fall within the ground, since it is not specific to a particular faith, or to a set of religious beliefs.⁵⁵

While Irish forums have yet to consider the definition of religion set out in the Achbita case,⁵⁶ the Labour Court has determined that protection extends to manifestations of beliefs relating to religious teaching or observance. In an employment context, however, the right to engage in the practice or manifestation of religion could not be exercised 'in a way that is disruptive of the business of the employer or constitutes an interference with the legitimate interests of the employer'.⁵⁷

National legislation does not refer to philosophical beliefs. It appears from the wording of the provisions concerning discrimination on the religion ground that the belief in question must be a religious one, and so the provisions do not adequately prohibit discrimination on the grounds of religion or belief.

The Labour Court appears to accept that humanist beliefs may be covered, but apparently as constituting a lack of religious belief similar to atheism⁵⁸ and not because humanism could be considered a 'religious belief'.⁵⁹ In a 2016 decision, the WRC rejected the complaint of an individual who was not permitted to wear a colander on his head for the purposes of a photograph when he was making an application to renew his driver's licence.⁶⁰ The complainant argued that the action was discriminatory, as wearing such an item was a feature of his religious beliefs as a 'Pastafarian', and the respondent's guidelines permitted individuals to wear head coverings for religious reasons. Having reviewed the definitions of religion and philosophical belief developed in case law under the UK Equality Act 2010, the WRC determined that the belief system in question did not constitute a 'religious belief' for the purposes of ESA. In reaching that conclusion the WRC referred to the fact that Pastafarianism uses 'satire as an effective tool of communication' and to the 'occasional and selective nature' of the complainant's use of the colander. While the precise basis for the finding is not clear, the WRC's reference to a definition of philosophical belief suggests that it may be prepared to interpret the provision broadly.

c) Disability

Under EEA and ESA, the disability ground applies where 'one is a person with a disability and the other either is not or is a person with a different disability.'⁶¹ Disability is defined as:

- '(a) the total or partial absence of a person's bodily or mental functions, including the absence of a part of a person's body;
- (b) the presence in the body of organisms causing, or likely to cause, chronic disease or illness;
- (c) the malfunction, malformation or disfigurement of a part of a person's body;
- (d) a condition or malfunction which results in a person learning differently from a person without the condition or malfunction; or
- (e) a condition, illness or disease which affects a person's thought processes, perception of reality, emotions or judgment or which results in disturbed behaviour.'⁶²

The ground covers those that have a disability at present, a history of disability, may have a disability in the future, or are imputed a disability.⁶³ Direct discrimination based primarily on a previous disability was established in a 2019 case.⁶⁴ The complainant had been on sick leave due to depression for approximately 16 months. She was certified fit to return to normal duties by her doctor and psychiatrist and did not seek reasonable accommodation. The complainant argued that she was treated less favourably following her return to work because of her previous disability. Specifically, she argued that, because of her history of mental illness, she had been placed on reduced working hours, assigned 'menial tasks', subjected to surreptitious monitoring of her work, placed on four weeks of leave and denied training opportunities. The WRC agreed that this treatment had occurred and was 'directly related' to the complainant's disability, without elaborating precisely on how the complainant was covered by the disability ground. The respondent was directed to pay EUR 25 000 in compensation. In 2018, the Labour Court held that the ground operates asymmetrically, so that non-disabled persons do not have locus standi to bring a disability-ground complaint.⁶⁵

The definition of disability does not fully accord with the concept adopted by the Court of Justice of the European Union (CJEU) in HK Danmark (Ring and Skouboe Werge),⁶⁶ in that it does not explicitly refer to barriers that may hinder the full and effective societal participation of a person with disabilities. In practice, however, when applying the duty to reasonably accommodate, adjudicators require employers to comprehensively consider how work practices and the general employment environment might be adjusted so as to eliminate barriers to participation in employment.⁶⁷ The Irish definition does not require a condition to last a long time in order to qualify as a disability,⁶⁸ nor does it make the distinction between disability and sickness or illness.⁶⁹ In 2019, however, the Labour Court issued a determination which appears to endorse the more restrictive understanding of disability developed by the CJEU in the sense that a limitation arising from an illness must be long term. The Court found that a relatively short illness does not amount to a disability that hinders 'the full and effective participation of the person concerned in professional life on an equal basis with other workers'.⁷⁰ Its decision omitted to consider the 'minimum requirements' and non-retrogression principles set out in Directive 2000/78. It remains to be seen how the law will develop.

A 2018 case established that infertility was a disability for the purposes of EEA, as it could be said to result from a 'malfunction ... of a part of a person's body' as set out under Section 2(1)(c).⁷¹ The respondent in a 2019 complaint disputed the designation of fibromyalgia as a 'disability'.⁷² In light of the medical evidence presented by both parties, the WRC concluded that the complainant's fibromyalgia constituted 'a condition, illness or disease which affects a person's thought processes, perception of reality, emotions or judgment or which results in disturbed behaviour', under Section 2(1)(e) EEA. The manifestations of the condition included excessive fatigue, difficulty coping and concentrating, mood variation and generalised muscle pain. They were long-term, had a significant impact on the complainant, and hindered her full and effective participation in the workplace on an equal basis with others. Thus, the condition amounted to a disability in line with HK Danmark, as well as Irish law. Stress caused by the illness of a relative or loved one is not 'an abnormality or malfunction', according to the Labour Court. It is 'a normal human condition' and cannot be classified as a disability.⁷³

d) Age

The age ground is defined as referring to people of different ages,⁷⁴ but in employment applies only in relation to persons above the maximum age at which a person is statutorily obliged to attend school.⁷⁵ In access to goods and services it does not apply to persons aged under 18.⁷⁶

e) Sexual orientation

Sexual orientation is defined as 'heterosexual, homosexual or bisexual orientation', without further elaboration.⁷⁷ Case law has not explored the meaning of those terms. Gay and lesbian people have pursued the vast majority of complaints on the ground under both ESA and EEA, with one case referred to by a man on the 'bisexual orientation' aspect of the ground.⁷⁸

⁶⁹ A person who has recovered from an illness and returns to employment following sick leave will not automatically have a disability as defined under EEA; such a finding rests on the facts. 2.1.2 Multiple discrimination

In Ireland, multiple discrimination is not prohibited by law.

However, complaints may be referred on more than one ground. The legislation specifies that complaints lodged on several grounds must be investigated as a single case but that a decision must be made on each of the claims.⁷⁹ In practice, adjudicators deal with the grounds in turn, requiring a case to be established separately on each ground.⁸⁰ Even where a complaint succeeds on several discriminatory grounds the applicable compensation limits apply.

In Ireland, the following case law deals with multiple discrimination.

In a limited number of cases, the first instance forum for hearing discrimination law complaints has tacitly recognised multiple discrimination. In an equal pay case, O'Brien v ComputerScope Limited,⁸¹ the issues of age and gender were treated together, perhaps because the actual comparators were both of a different gender and a different age to the complainant. In other cases, it was determined that discrimination on one ground was 'compounded' by discrimination on another ground; the role of the two grounds concerned is differentiated in the decisions.⁸² *Lindberg v Press Photographers Association of Ireland*⁸³ is notable for a finding that direct discrimination arose from a combination of the race and gender grounds. In the more recent case of *Parris v Trinity College Dublin*⁸⁴ the Equality Tribunal accepted in principle that a prima facie case of indirect discrimination could arise from a combination of discriminatory grounds. However, on a request for a preliminary ruling, the CJEU determined that, where a national rule does not constitute discrimination either on the ground of sexual orientation or on the ground of age taken in isolation, there is 'no new category of discrimination resulting from the combination of more than one of those grounds'.⁸⁵

The approach to multiple discrimination adopted in the Tribunal decisions set out above is exceptional and is arguably unlikely to be developed further absent legislative amendment. In 2017, Ireland's national equality body noted that, in failing to provide for 'compound discrimination', domestic equality legislation was not in full compliance with the UN Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. It recommended that, 'equality legislation be amended to include a definition of multiple discrimination'.⁸⁶ In 2019, the UN Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination recommended that Ireland review ESA and EEA to provide for the explicit prohibition of multiple discrimination.⁸⁷ There are no plans to enact such legislation, however.

2.1.3 Assumed and associated discrimination

a) Discrimination by assumption

In Ireland, discrimination based on a perception or assumption of a person's characteristics is prohibited in national law.

Section 6(1)(a)(iv) EEA provides:

'6(1) For the purposes of this Act and without prejudice to its provisions relating to discrimination occurring in particular circumstances, discrimination shall be taken to occur where -(a) a person is treated less favourably than another person is, has been or would be treated in a comparable situation on any of the grounds specified in subsection (2) (in this Act referred to as the "discriminatory grounds") which ... (iv) is imputed to the person concerned.'

A decision under EEA found that an employee who had been treated less favourably because of her body mass had been subjected to disability discrimination by assumption.⁸⁸ The Equality Tribunal did not make a finding as to whether obesity of itself is a disability. Irish law thereby recognises that obesity may be a basis for a disability discrimination complaint, albeit in a different manner from the CJEU judgment in FOA (Kaltoft) v Billund.⁸⁹

Section 3(1)(a)(iv) ESA states:

'3(1) For the purposes of this Act, discrimination shall be taken to occur— (a) where a person is treated less favourably than another person is, has been or would be treated in a comparable situation on any of the grounds specified in subsection (2) (in this Act referred to as the "discriminatory grounds") which ... (iv) is imputed to the person concerned.'

An Irish citizen born in Indonesia lodged a successful race-ground complaint concerning correspondence issued by the Department of Social Protection.⁹⁰ She was sent a series of letters seeking proof of her nationality in the context of accessing child benefit payments. The respondent acknowledged that such correspondence was issued to non-Irish nationals as an anti-fraud measure. The WRC found that the Department's practice was a clear form of direct discrimination in contravention of ESA and that the complainant had been subjected to less favourable treatment based on an assumption as to her race (nationality). An order for EUR 3 000 in compensation was made, and the respondent was directed to review its fraud detection practices for the child benefit scheme to ensure compliance with ESA.⁹¹

b) Discrimination by association

In Ireland, discrimination based on association with persons with particular characteristics is prohibited in national law.

Section 6(1)(b) EEA provides:

'6(1) For the purposes of this Act and without prejudice to its provisions relating to discrimination occurring in particular circumstances, discrimination shall be taken to occur where ... (b) a person who is associated with another person
(i) is treated, by virtue of that association, less favourably than a person who is not so associated is, has been or would be treated in a comparable situation, and
(ii) similar treatment of that other person on any of the discriminatory grounds would ... constitute discrimination.'

Discrimination by association on the ground of sexual orientation was established in a 2015 case.⁹² The complainant, a teacher, was discriminated against when a school principal made insulting comments about her son's sexual orientation. A separate complaint of harassment on the religion ground was also sustained. The WRC awarded the complainant EUR 3 000 in compensation for the breaches of EEA and also directed the respondent to arrange training for the school's board of management and all staff on employment policies, particularly in relation to equality, discrimination and harassment.

Section 3(1)(b) ESA states:

'3(1) For the purposes of this Act, discrimination shall be taken to occur ...
(b) where a person who is associated with another person
(i) is treated, by virtue of that association, less favourably than a person who is not so associated is, has been or would be treated in a comparable situation, and
(ii) similar treatment of that other person on any of the discriminatory grounds would ... constitute discrimination.'

Several complaints of discrimination by association have been established under ESA, many on the Traveller community ground. For example, in Battles v The Killarney Heights Hotel the complainant, a Traveller, and her husband, a settled person, had been discriminated against when refused service in a hotel. Mr Battles' claim was that of discrimination by association under Section 3(1)(b).⁹³ Discrimination by association on the victimisation ground has occurred in a number of cases, such as O'Brien v Dunnes Stores, Tralee.⁹⁴ A man was refused access to a store some weeks after his brother had been asked to leave while he was shopping there. The brother had notified the respondent in writing that he intended to lodge a discrimination complaint. When the complainant tried to enter the shop, he was denied access by a security guard who told him that it was because his brother 'was taking a case to the court'. By suggesting that he was going to refer a complaint, the man's brother was covered by the victimisation ground. The victimisation ground protects people from adverse treatment for using or indicating an intention to use ESA. In being denied access a few weeks later, the complainant was therefore treated less favourably by virtue of his association with someone covered by a discriminatory ground.

National law is in line with the judgment in Case C-303/06, Coleman v Attridge Law and Steve Law.⁹⁵ To date, a few WRC decisions have referred to Case C-83/14, CHEZ Razpredelenie Bulgaria AD v Komisia za zashtita ot diskriminatsia, but since none pertained to indirect discrimination by association, it remains to be seen whether domestic law is aligned with that judgment.⁹⁶

2.2 Direct discrimination (Article 2(2)(a))

a) Prohibition and definition of direct discrimination

In Ireland, direct discrimination is prohibited in national law. It is defined under both EEA and ESA as occurring where a person is treated less favourably than another person is, has been or would be treated in a comparable situation on any of the discriminatory grounds, which exists, existed but no longer exists, or may exist in the future.⁹⁷

As in previous years, several complaints of direct discrimination were upheld in 2020. Examples of EEA cases include:

Age ground: access to employment;⁹⁸ conditions of employment;⁹⁹ discriminatory dismissal.¹⁰⁰

Disability ground: conditions of employment;¹⁰¹ discriminatory dismissal.¹⁰²

Race ground: conditions of employment.¹⁰³

⁹⁵ Coleman has been applied by adjudicators in several cases, including Workplace Relations Commission, A Former Employee v A Financial Services Company, DEC-E2016-107, 19 July 2016, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2016/July/DEC-E2016-107.html>; Labour Court, A Worker v Two Respondents, EDA1129, 22 November 2011, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2011/November/EDA1129.html>.

Sexual orientation: conditions of employment.¹⁰⁴

While a few religion-ground complaints were heard by the WRC, none was upheld.¹⁰⁵

One of the successful race-ground cases involved the use of a hypothetical comparator.¹⁰⁶ The complainant, a Brazilian national, was employed as a receptionist in a hostel. She and a colleague on reception, who was also Brazilian, were constantly monitored on CCTV, and they were assigned housekeeping duties outside the scope of their role. Further, the respondent did not address an 'alleged racial slur' uttered by the manager's mother, who while not an employee, carried out a management role on a day-to-day basis. The WRC considered that the respondent paid 'little or no regard to the rights' of the complainant, noting that it had 'no policies or other measures in place to safeguard the dignity of employees or to enable employees to raise concerns regarding disrespectful and undermining behaviour'. From the facts set out in the decision, it seems there were no actual comparators. The adjudication officer noted that all reception and cleaning staff were Brazilian nationals, and pointed out that the phrase 'would be treated', in the definition of direct discrimination, permits the use of hypothetical comparators. The WRC was satisfied that the respondent would not have treated an Irish person in the same manner as that in which the complainant was treated. She was awarded EUR 15 000 in compensation.

Under ESA, there were several findings of direct discrimination on the Traveller community ground in 2020. As in previous years, the bulk of these involved private sector respondents, including hotels,¹⁰⁷ a pub,¹⁰⁸ a beauty salon,¹⁰⁹ and a credit union.¹¹⁰ One complaint against a public sector body was upheld.¹¹¹ In refusing his application for social housing, a local authority treated a Traveller man less favourably than a settled person would have been treated. This case is summarised in Chapter 12.2.

Irish law recognises that direct discrimination may arise from a failure to afford different treatment to persons who are differently situated.¹¹² To date, all cases appear to be on the chemotherapy, whereas an Irish colleague was paid a full salary for a much longer period of sick leave. The complainant was awarded EUR 20 000 in compensation.

race ground and concern migrant workers.¹¹³ In essence, employers may be obliged to modify certain employment practices to accommodate the needs of individuals who encounter linguistic and cultural difficulties in the workplace. Employers have been obliged to provide translated contracts for foreign nationals¹¹⁴ and, in the context of disciplinary proceedings, have 'a positive duty to ensure that all workers fully understand what is alleged against them, the gravity of the alleged misconduct and their right to mount a full defence, including the right to representation.'¹¹⁵ In one such decision the Director of the Equality Tribunal described the case law as establishing a 'duty of care to foreign employees.'¹¹⁶ This 'duty' stems from the prohibition of direct discrimination and is entirely separate from the legal provision on reasonable accommodation, which only applies to the disability ground (see Chapter 2.6). However, it does give rise to obligations, in a very limited number of cases, such as might be expected under a reasonable accommodation duty.

b) Justification of direct discrimination

The law does not permit justification of direct discrimination, save with respect to specific provisions on the age ground concerning retirement ages, fixed-term contracts and maximum recruitment ages (see Chapter 4.6).

2.3 Indirect discrimination (Article 2(2)(b))

a) Prohibition and definition of indirect discrimination

In Ireland, indirect discrimination is prohibited in national law. It is defined.

Indirect discrimination is defined as occurring where an apparently neutral provision would put a person belonging to a protected group at a particular disadvantage compared with other employees of their employer, or where an apparently neutral provision would put a person belonging to a protected group at a particular disadvantage compared with other persons.¹¹⁷

As in previous years, relatively few EEA indirect discrimination complaints on the five grounds were determined in 2020. None was upheld. For example, a complaint on the age ground failed because the impugned provision, an educational qualification, did not put persons of the complainant's age at a particular disadvantage.¹¹⁸ The complainant in a race-ground case omitted to identify an apparently neutral provision.¹¹⁹

In 2020, there was one successful complaint of indirect discrimination on the race ground under ESA. It concerned an application for a driving licence on the part of an asylum seeker,¹²⁰ mirroring a 2019 decision on the same substantive issue and ground.¹²¹ On appeal, however, the Circuit Court overturned the WRC's finding.¹²² The court did not consider the indirect discrimination provision as such; rather, it found that 'the WRC went substantially beyond its remit' under ESA. The respondent had argued, inter alia, that the requirement to provide certain documents as proof of ordinary residence was required by law and was therefore covered by the exemption under Section 14(1)(a)(i) ESA for differences in treatment required by an enactment (see Chapter 3.2.5). The Circuit Court agreed that the respondent's submissions set out the law correctly.

b) Justification test for indirect discrimination

Indirect discrimination may be justified if the provision is objectively justified by a legitimate aim and the means of achieving that aim are appropriate and necessary. The justification test is compatible with the directives.

2.3.1 Statistical evidence

a) Legal framework

In Ireland, there is legislation regulating the collection of personal data.

Under Section 2(1) of the Data Protection Acts 1988-2018, 'special categories of personal data' means:

- '(a) personal data revealing—
 - (i) the racial or ethnic origin of the data subject,

The processing of such data is prohibited unless the data subject has given their explicit consent before processing begins or the processing is authorised by law, for example, to protect the interests of a data subject, to comply with employment legislation or for reasons of public interest. Personal data relating to criminal convictions and offences may only be processed under the control of an official authority. The Data Protection Commission was established in 2018 as the state's data protection authority for the purposes of the General Data Protection Regulation.¹²⁴

In Ireland, statistical evidence may be admitted under national law in order to establish indirect discrimination and to design positive action measures on all five grounds, under Sections 19(4)(c) and 22(1A) EEA and Section 3(3A) ESA. It is admissible as evidence in court. Statistical data do not appear to be used in any coherent manner to design positive action measures, with the exception of measures relating to the disability ground in employment¹²⁵ and in order to address disadvantage in access to third-level education.¹²⁶ According to IHREC, the lack of relevant data is an impediment to evidence-based action on equality in the workplace.¹²⁷

b) Practice

In Ireland, statistical evidence is used in practice in order to establish indirect discrimination. There is no reluctance to use statistical data as evidence in court.¹²⁸ Census data was adduced in a successful 2018 EEA case, for example.¹²⁹ Statistics held by the Adoption Authority on the national origins of adopted children was used in a case on the race ground concerning school admission policies under ESA.¹³⁰

In a 2002 decision, the Labour Court emphasised that its procedures are intended to facilitate parties whether legally represented or not, and that it would be alien to the ethos of the Court to oblige parties to undertake the inconvenience and expense involved in producing elaborate statistical evidence to prove matters which are obvious to the members of the Court by drawing on their own knowledge and experience.¹³¹ Adjudicators have consistently adopted this approach, relying on matters within their specialist expertise to ease the evidential burden associated with indirect discrimination complaints.¹³²

The Labour Court emphasises that statistics are not decisive in themselves, but are one factor that may be taken into account in determining whether a measure is indirectly discriminatory.¹³³

On appeal, the Labour Court determined that the correct pool of comparison was not used at first instance, and hence that the census data which concerned the population at large was not sufficient to raise a presumption that the impugned criterion placed nurses in the complainant's age group at a particular disadvantage: Health Service Executive v Fitzgerald, EDA1915, 22 May 2019, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2019/may/eda1915.html>.

¹³³ Labour Court, The Nationalist & Leinster Times Ltd v Ashmore, EDA133, 21 January 2013, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2013/January/EDA133.html>.

In a 2015 judgment the Supreme Court considered the interpretation of indirect discrimination under ESA for the first time, and held that statistical analysis is required in order to establish that a person belonging to a protected group is at a 'particular disadvantage' compared with others.¹³⁴ The case was taken on the Traveller community ground and the Court made no reference to EU law on the burden of proof. To date, the judgment has not impacted on decisions issued by the first instance forum for discrimination complaints. The Equality Tribunal applied the Stokes judgment in a 2015 case, which challenged a criterion that allocated school places according to the date of application from those living in the school's catchment area.¹³⁵ The complainant, a British national who had migrated to Ireland in 2002, claimed that the provision was indirectly discriminatory on the race ground. He maintained that the school's policy was intrinsically liable to disadvantage the children of migrants, since they would move into the catchment area of the school at a later date than indigenous children. The Director of the Equality Tribunal noted that the absence of statistical evidence was 'not necessarily fatal' to the complainant's case, which appears to be a less stringent evidential burden than that applied in Stokes.¹³⁶ Nevertheless, the Tribunal was 'unwilling, in the absence of hard evidence on the demographics of the catchment and movements into it in the relevant time period, to assume that non-Irish children are put at a particular disadvantage.' The decision illustrates the significant obstacles to be overcome by complainants in some indirect discrimination cases and the need for greater access to equality data.

The Equality (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 2015 effected a slight change to the wording of the national indirect discrimination provisions that may militate against a shift towards 'requiring' statistical evidence.¹³⁷ Formerly, ESA, EEA and the Pensions Acts applied to a provision that 'puts' a person at a particular disadvantage. In line with the wording of the directives, the definitions now refer to provisions that 'would put' persons at a particular disadvantage compared with other persons.¹³⁸

2.4 Harassment (Article 2(3))

a) Prohibition and definition of harassment

In Ireland, harassment is prohibited in national law. It is defined.

Section 14(A) EEA prohibits harassment in employment on grounds of gender, age, race, religion, family status, disability, civil status, sexual orientation and membership of the Traveller community. Section 11 ESA prohibits harassment on the same grounds in access to goods and services. Under both statutes, harassment is defined as any unwanted conduct related to any discriminatory ground which has the purpose or effect of violating a person's dignity and creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment for the person.¹³⁹ This conduct can include acts, requests, spoken words, gestures or the production, display or circulation of written words, pictures or other material.

¹³⁷ Ireland, Equality (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 2015, 10 December 2015, <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/eli/2015/act/43/enacted/en/print.html>. The 2015 Act effected a number of changes to Irish anti-discrimination law, many of which sought to align national law with the requirements of the EU anti-discrimination directives. It amended EEA by introducing an objective justification requirement for both mandatory retirement ages and offers of fixed-term contracts to persons over the compulsory retirement age (see Chapter 4.6). The religious ethos exception provided for under Section 37 EEA was altered substantially (see Chapter 4.2). Individuals may now lodge EEA complaints about discriminatory advertising; formerly, such cases could be taken solely by IHREC. The Commission retains exclusive jurisdiction with respect to discriminatory advertising under ESA – see Workplace Relations Commission, Alamazani v Daft Media Limited, ADJ-00006704, 23 February 2018, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2018/February/ADJ-00006704.html>. Further, a new housing assistance ground was included under ESA, enabling persons in receipt of various social protection payments to challenge discrimination in the context of accommodation provision.

¹³⁸ Section 3(1)(c) ESA; Sections 19(4)(a) and 22(1)(a) EEA; Section 68 Pensions Act 1990-2018.

Various forms of communication have been the subject of successful harassment complaints under ESA and EEA, including 'spoken words',¹⁴⁰ text messages¹⁴¹ and graffiti.¹⁴² A complainant does not need to demonstrate that she or he falls under one of the discriminatory grounds, since it is sufficient that the impugned conduct is 'related to' a ground. Thus, in Kane v Eirjet Ltd,¹⁴³ a non-disabled woman and her disabled son were both subjected to harassment when airline staff dealt with them in an offensive manner.

Two complaints of harassment on the race ground, comprising racist verbal abuse of tenants, were upheld in 2019.¹⁴⁴ In 2020, a landlord who made racist comments about the type of tenants he sought was directed to pay EUR 10 000 in compensation (see Chapter 12.2).¹⁴⁵ The complainant in a successful disability-ground complaint was subjected to harassment when a personal advisor employed by a job placement service 'berated and laughed at' him when he mentioned his disability.¹⁴⁶ Compensation of EUR 1 000 was awarded.

Under EEA, there was a successful complaint of harassment on the sexual orientation ground in 2020 (summarised in Chapter 12.2).¹⁴⁷ A Polish national who was subjected to racist verbal abuse by other employees of a hotel was awarded EUR 5 000 in compensation.¹⁴⁸ In a further successful complaint of harassment and direct discrimination on the race ground, an afterschool service was directed to pay EUR 10 000 in compensation to a Brazilian employee.¹⁴⁹ The managing director denied that he had shouted at the complainant on numerous occasions, made disparaging remarks about her knowledge of the English language, and ultimately physically assaulted her. However, according to the adjudication officer, the director was 'very evasive', and his evidence was 'less than credible'. The complainant's account was corroborated in part by documentary evidence, including a complaint to the Gardaí (police).

In Ireland, harassment explicitly constitutes a form of discrimination in employment (Section 14A EEA), but does not explicitly constitute a form of discrimination in access to goods and services (Section 11 ESA).

b) Scope of liability for harassment

In Ireland, where harassment is perpetrated by an employee, the employer is liable.

Section 14A EEA provides:

'14A(1) For the purposes of this Act, where
(a) an employee (in this section referred to as "the victim") is harassed or sexually harassed either at a place where the employee is employed (in this section referred to as "the workplace") or otherwise in the course of his or her employment by a person who is
(i) employed at that place or by the same employer, (ii) the victim's employer, or
(iii) a client, customer, or other business contact of the victim's employer and the circumstances of the harassment are such that the employer ought reasonably to have taken steps to prevent it, or
(b) without prejudice to the generality of paragraph (a)
(i) such harassment has occurred, and (ii) either
(I) the victim is treated differently in the workplace or otherwise in the course of his or her employment by reason of rejecting or accepting the harassment, or
(II) it could reasonably be anticipated that he or she would be so treated, the harassment or sexual harassment constitutes discrimination by the victim's employer in relation to the victim's conditions of employment.'

In a 2016 decision, the Labour Court reaffirmed that the provision applies to conduct that occurs outside the workplace.¹⁵⁰ Moreover, there is no requirement to show that the perpetrator was acting in the course, or within the scope, of their employment. The proper test is whether the victim experienced harassment in the course of their employment. The conduct in issue included an abusive message posted by an employee on social media, which was directed at the complainant in his capacity as a worker representative. Consequently, Section 14A of the Acts applied and the employer was responsible. However, the employer was entitled to avail of the statutory defence set out under Section 14A(2). The defence applies where the employer can show that it took reasonably practicable steps to prevent harassment. Employers must demonstrate, at a minimum, that an anti-harassment policy was in place before the harassment occurred and that the policy was effectively communicated to all employees. Additionally, managers should receive appropriate training.¹⁵¹ In the instant case, such an approach had been adopted, an investigation was undertaken, and a disciplinary sanction was imposed.

An employer could not avail of the defence in a 2019 case because the investigation of a disability-ground harassment complaint was fundamentally flawed. The complainant was not informed that a formal investigation was being conducted or afforded any opportunity to participate in the process. Moreover, the respondent failed to take appropriate remedial action to ensure that the employee would not be exposed to further harassment after he had made a complaint. It was 'totally inexplicable' that no measures were taken to separate the complainant and the perpetrator in the workplace pending the conclusion of the investigation.¹⁵² In a 2020 decision the WRC held that the respondent's reaction to a harassment complaint, while not ideal, was adequate to avail of the defence.¹⁵³ The Nigerian complainant was subjected to extreme racist abuse by a team leader on two occasions. When notified of the second incident, the respondent encouraged the complainant to proceed with a formal complaint, it investigated the complaint, apologised to the complainant, elicited an apology from the perpetrator, and informed the complainant that a sanction had been applied. The perpetrator was issued with a final written warning and was obliged to undertake training. The complainant argued that the process was deficient as he was not asked to participate in the investigation. However, the WRC was satisfied that, because the perpetrator readily accepted the complainant's account of events as accurate, his absence did not compromise the outcome. Furthermore, it did not accept that the sanction imposed was inadequate. Other aspects of the process were 'imperfect': a written report was not issued, and the complainant was not offered counselling. While such steps are recommended in the statutory code of practice,¹⁵⁴ the respondent could still avail of the defence under Section 14A(2). These findings were reached even though the complainant experienced anxiety because of having to continue to work with the perpetrator. The WRC noted that the complainant did not ask to be moved to a different section and that there was no further incident. Overall, it was satisfied that the respondent took adequate steps to reverse the effect of the harassment and to prevent a recurrence.

Liability for the conduct of an employer's client was established in the 2017 case of Rusu v Senture Security Ltd.¹⁵⁵ The complainant, a Romanian national, was employed as a security guard and was assigned work at a hotel that had contracted with the respondent to provide security services. The owner of the hotel approached the complainant one evening and said, 'All Romanians are thieves and liars.' When the complainant reported this incident, Senture Security instructed him to desist from work at the premises and advised him that it would find another suitable work location. However, it subsequently failed to redeploy the complainant. The employer could not rely on the defence under Section 14A(2) since it failed to take any steps to prevent or remedy the harassment.

Service providers, such as landlords, schools and hospitals, are liable for harassment that occurs in the provision of the service concerned. Under the vicarious liability principle set out under Section 42 ESA, service providers are legally responsible for the discriminatory actions of their employees and agents. Liability was imposed on the respondent landlord for the conduct of his son in a 2019 race-ground harassment case.¹⁵⁶ The son lived in the adjoining house and was the respondent's agent because he acted as a contact point between the landlord and the tenant whom he subjected to racist verbal abuse. Section 11(2) ESA further obliges service providers also to protect people from harassment or sexual harassment committed by a third party, subject to a defence. This would include liability for harassment perpetrated by other tenants, clients or customers, for example. A statutory defence would be available if the service provider took such steps as were reasonably practicable to prevent harassment (Section 11(3)).

Equality legislation does not provide for liability on the part of the individual harasser. There is no specific liability for trade unions or professional associations other than as employers or service providers.¹⁵⁷

Such a complaint should be lodged instead under ESA.

2.5 Instructions to discriminate (Article 2(4))

a) Prohibition of instructions to discriminate

In Ireland, instructions to discriminate are prohibited in national law. 'Instructions' are not defined.

Section 2(1) EEA specifies that 'discrimination includes the issue of an instruction to discriminate and, in Part V and VI, includes prohibited conduct within the meaning of the Equal Status Acts 2000.' Part V and VI EEA set out the functions and powers of IHREC. This section thus ensures that IHREC can take or support proceedings involving an instruction to discriminate.

Section 14 EEA provides that a person who 'procures or attempts to procure' another person to engage in discrimination or victimisation shall be guilty of an offence. This criminal offence, which would cover at least some forms of instruction, is actionable in the District Court. Proceedings may be instituted by the Workplace Relations Commission or by IHREC.¹⁵⁸

ESA does not explicitly prohibit the issuing of instructions to discriminate, although it might be argued that the prohibition of the procurement or attempted procurement of 'prohibited conduct' under Section 13 includes the issuing of instructions. Section 2(1) provides that 'prohibited conduct' means discrimination against, or sexual harassment or harassment of, or permitting the sexual harassment or harassment of, a person. Section 13 is not confined to employees of the procurer, and so it covers third parties, including agents. Procurement is a criminal offence, and proceedings may only be instigated by the Workplace Relations Commission or by IHREC. It appears that no such proceedings have been initiated.

In Ireland, instructions explicitly constitute a form of discrimination under the EEA (Section 2(1)).

b) Scope of liability for instructions to discriminate

In Ireland, the instructor is liable.

Equality legislation does not explicitly provide for liability by the individual discriminator or instructed person, with the exception of Section 10 EEA and Section 12 ESA, which enable liability to be imposed on a person who displays or publishes discriminatory advertising. The generic provisions on vicarious liability under EEA and ESA apply to instructions to discriminate and render employers and service providers liable for instructions issued by employees and agents (subject to a defence).

Employers and service providers (e.g. landlords, schools and hospitals) are liable for discrimination, including by instruction, perpetrated by employees. The legislation specifies that anything done by a person in the course of his or her employment shall be treated as done also by that person's employer, whether or not it was done with the employer's knowledge or approval.¹⁵⁹ Consequently, an employer could be held liable for an instruction to discriminate issued by a manager, for example. An employer can evade liability by proving that it took such steps as were reasonably practicable to prevent the employee (a) from doing that act, or (b) from doing in the course of his or her employment acts of that description.¹⁶⁰

¹⁵⁸ Section 100 EEA. The Supreme Court concluded that the provision in the Employment Equality Bill 1996 was not repugnant to the Constitution. The Court noted that it would have to be proved in the ordinary way that the person in question had an intention to commit the offence: Article 26 of the Constitution and the Employment Equality Bill 1996, Re [1997] 2 IR 321 at p.369.

¹⁵⁹ Section 15(1) EEA, Section 42(1) ESA.

¹⁶⁰ Section 15(3) EEA, Section 42(3) ESA.

The provisions on vicarious liability for agents make it clear that persons cannot discriminate through an intermediary. Both ESA and EEA specify that: 'Anything done by a person as agent for another person, with the authority (whether express or implied and whether precedent or subsequent) of that other person shall, in any proceedings brought under this Act, be treated for the purposes of this Act as done also by that other person.'¹⁶¹ Where a principal directs or instructs an agent to engage in prohibited conduct, both parties can potentially be found liable. However, since the provisions that outlaw discrimination under EEA are addressed to employers, the respondent (and hence liable person) will generally be the employer.¹⁶² In one case, the Labour Court held that, where a prospective employer is instructed by another not to employ a particular person, and that instruction is tainted with discrimination, liability cannot be avoided by pleading that the instruction was accepted without question. The Court found that, under the terms of Section 8 of the Act, which provides that an employer shall not discriminate against an employee or prospective employee and that a provider of agency work shall not discriminate against an agency worker, both the agency and the instructing company could potentially be held liable as 'concurrent wrongdoers'.¹⁶³

Under ESA, service providers have been found liable for implementing discriminatory policies set by other entities such as insurance underwriters, tour operators and landlords. Some of the impugned measures have taken the form of instructions to discriminate, such as a landlord's explicit direction to a letting agent not to accept tenants in receipt of rent allowance,¹⁶⁴ and an insurance company's instruction not to provide persons with epilepsy access to certain cosmetic treatments.¹⁶⁵ Liability may be imposed on a person for the offences of procuring or attempting to procure discrimination (Section 14 EEA; Section 13 ESA). In the absence of case law, the parameters of these provisions are unclear.

2.6 Reasonable accommodation duties (Article 2(2)(b)(ii) and Article 5 Directive 2000/78)

- a) Implementation of the duty to provide reasonable accommodation for people with disabilities in the area of employment

In Ireland, the duty on employers to provide reasonable accommodation for people with disabilities is included in the law, and it is defined.

Section 16(3)(a) EEA provides that 'a person who has a disability is fully competent to undertake, and fully capable of undertaking, any duties if the person would be so fully competent and capable on reasonable accommodation (in this subsection referred to as 'appropriate measures') being provided by the person's employer.'¹⁶⁶ Section 16(3)(b) specifies:

¹⁶¹ Section 15(2) EEA, Section 42(2) ESA.

¹⁶² The WRC accepted that an equal pay case could proceed against the Department of Education and Skills even though it was not the complainant teachers' employer, since the Department was responsible for setting teachers' remuneration: Horgan and Keegan v Department of Education and Skills and others, DEC-E2016-041, 4 March 2016, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2016/March/DEC-E2016-041.html>. On appeal, the Labour Court sought a preliminary ruling from the CJEU concerning the parameters of age-ground discrimination under Directive 2000/78/EC. The text of the Labour Court's decision has not been published. In Case C-154/18, Horgan and Keegan v Minister for Education and Skills [2019] I.R.L.R. 597, the CJEU ruled that a 10 % reduction in the pay of new entrants to the public service in 2011 did not constitute discrimination on the grounds of age.

¹⁶⁶ Case law has established that the obligation on employers to provide reasonable accommodation applies to potential employees: Equality Tribunal, Harrington v East Coast Area Health Board, DEC-E2002-001, 23 January 2002, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2002/january/dec-e2002-001.html>.

'The employer shall take appropriate measures, where needed in a particular case, to enable a person who has a disability
(i) to have access to employment,
(ii) to participate or advance in employment, or
(iii) to undergo training, unless the measures would impose a disproportionate burden on the employer.'

'Appropriate measures' are defined under Section 16(4):

'(a) ... effective and practical measures, where needed in a particular case, to adapt the employer's place of business to the disability concerned,
(b) without prejudice to the generality of paragraph (a), includes the adaptation of premises and equipment, patterns of working time, distribution of tasks or the provision of training or integration resources, but
(c) does not include any treatment, facility or thing that the person might ordinarily or reasonably provide for himself or herself.'

Section 16(3)(c) provides that, in determining whether the measures would impose a disproportionate burden, account shall be taken of the financial and other costs entailed, the scale and financial resources of the employer's business, and the possibility of obtaining public funding or other assistance.

Section 16 does not refer to the term 'essential functions' used in Recital 17 of the preamble to the Employment Equality Directive. Reference is made instead to the 'duties' attached to a position.

Failure to provide reasonable accommodation is a free-standing form of discrimination.¹⁶⁷

b) Case law

Decisions emphasise that the duty to provide reasonable accommodation is a proactive one, which requires employers to undertake a two-stage inquiry.¹⁶⁸ They must carry out a full assessment of the employee's needs and then consider the measures necessary to accommodate them, which may include adapting working patterns¹⁶⁹ or relieving an employee of certain tasks.¹⁷⁰

As outlined in Chapter 12.2, a university failed to provide reasonable accommodation for an employee in declining her request to work from home on a part-time basis.¹⁷¹ Another staff member had been so facilitated and the respondent could not demonstrate why that option was not also feasible for the complainant.

In a 2018 judgment, the Court of Appeal held that, where an employee cannot undertake the essential functions of a position, there is no obligation on an employer to consider the redistribution of tasks.¹⁷² This judgment was at variance with some prior case law, which determined that a decision as to whether an employee was fully competent and capable could only be formed following a process in which the employer considered all available options in consultation with the employee.¹⁷³ On appeal, the Supreme Court held that employers are obliged to consider the redistribution of duties. It noted that the legislative provision does not refer to the 'essential' functions or duties of a post. Consequently, employers are obliged to consider the redistribution of any duties or tasks, even where they pertain to the essential functions of a job. However, the employer's obligations are not unlimited. The key test is whether any redistribution of duties or tasks would impose a 'disproportionate burden'. The Supreme Court noted that, where a redistribution of duties or tasks would effectively create a different job entirely, this would almost inevitably impose a disproportionate burden on an employer.¹⁷⁴ The Court also found that it is not mandatory to consult with the employee concerned, but it would be prudent for employers to do so.¹⁷⁵

Adjudicators routinely have regard to the scale and financial resources of employers' businesses in assessing the extent of the duty. In one case, for example, the respondent estimated the cost of providing a disabled toilet in the store where the complainant worked at EUR 22 000. The Labour Court found that, since the respondent was a large multinational company, expenditure of EUR 22 000 'could not by any standard be regarded as imposing a disproportionate burden in vindicating the complainant's right to work on the same basis as others'.¹⁷⁶ In Costello v Allied Irish Bank plc, the WRC found that the respondent had failed to provide reasonable accommodation because it did not adequately consider providing an employee with reduced working hours for an extended period.¹⁷⁷ Such a measure would not have imposed a disproportionate burden on the respondent, being a large retail bank, and given the nature of the complainant's role as an advisor in a call centre. In a 2020 case, the Labour Court found that an employer is not obliged to maintain an employee's previous level of earnings where they are working reduced hours because of a reasonable accommodation measure.¹⁷⁸

c) Definition of disability and non-discrimination protection

The definition of disability for the purposes of claiming reasonable accommodation is the same as the definition used for claiming protection from discrimination in general.

d) Failure to meet the duty of reasonable accommodation for people with disabilities

In Ireland, failure to meet the duty of reasonable accommodation in employment for people with disabilities is recognised as a form of discrimination.

If an employee would be fully competent and capable of undertaking the duties attached to a position if reasonable accommodation was provided, an employer that fails to provide such reasonable accommodation discriminates.¹⁷⁹

Failure to provide reasonable accommodation is a sui generis form of discrimination. The full range of sanctions for discrimination is applicable, including awards of compensation.

The burden of proof is reversed.¹⁸⁰

As regards justification, Section 16(1) EEA offers employers a defence in stating that nothing in the Act requires any person to recruit or promote an individual, retain an individual or provide training or experience if the individual will not undertake the required duties or will not accept the conditions under which those duties are required to be performed, or is not (or no longer) fully competent and available to undertake, and fully capable of undertaking the duties attached to that position.¹⁸¹ However, Section 16(3)(a) tempers the defence by clarifying that a person who has a disability is fully competent to undertake, and fully capable of undertaking, any duties if the person would be so fully competent and capable upon reasonable accommodation being provided by the person's employer. It is an occupational requirement that those employed in the police, prison service or any emergency service are fully competent, available and capable of undertaking the range of functions associated with such positions so that the operational capacity of the services concerned may be preserved.¹⁸² This provision reflects the wording of Recital 18 to Directive 2000/78 and was considered by the High Court in a 2020 case concerning a prison officer.¹⁸³ The Court overturned a Labour Court finding that the occupational requirement operates as a complete defence to a claim of discrimination under Section 16.¹⁸⁴ Rather, the occupational requirement should be considered in conjunction with the overarching obligation to provide reasonable accommodation (see case summary in Chapter 12.2).

e) Duties to provide reasonable accommodation in areas other than employment for people with disabilities

In Ireland, there is a legal duty to provide reasonable accommodation for people with disabilities outside the area of employment.

Section 4 ESA provides:

'(1) For the purposes of this Act discrimination includes a refusal or failure by the provider of a service to do all that is reasonable to accommodate the needs of a person with a disability by providing special treatment or facilities, if without such special treatment or facilities it would be impossible or unduly difficult for the person to avail himself or herself of the service.

(2) A refusal or failure to provide the special treatment or facilities to which subsection (1) refers shall not be deemed reasonable unless such provision would give rise to a cost, other than a nominal cost, to the provider of the service in question.'

The 'special treatment or facilities' which the goods or service provider must provide are not defined. Owing to a Supreme Court judgment, the duty is subject to a nominal cost threshold, which is less onerous than the 'disproportionate burden' standard applicable under EEA.¹⁸⁵

A service provider must 'do all that is reasonable' in providing treatment or facilities, meaning that it must address a range of options. Case law establishes that, in order to comply with its obligations, the service provider should usually engage in a process of consultation with the disabled person. However, the term 'reasonable' also limits the duty, in that a service provider is not expected to undertake very burdensome measures.¹⁸⁶ In other words, restrictions are placed on the obligation both by the term 'reasonable' and by the nominal cost ceiling. The extent of a service provider's duties depends on its scale and resources, and on whether grants are available.¹⁸⁷ In that regard, adjudicators tend to adopt a more stringent approach to the duties of public bodies such as housing authorities. *A Complainant v A Local Authority*¹⁸⁸ addressed grant aid to fund an extension to a house in order to meet the needs of an autistic boy. The nominal cost defence could not avail the respondent because it provided no evidence as to how much the extension would cost, and any such work would only amount to a small proportion of the overall housing budget funded by Government. In a 2017 case, the WRC found that a requirement to give 24 hours' notice in order to guarantee access to an accessible bus did not contravene the reasonable accommodation duty. Given the factors involved in ensuring wheelchair access (staff training, adaptation of vehicles and ground infrastructure), the notice requirement was reasonable and tempered by the nominal cost threshold.¹⁸⁹ Similarly, in a 2018 decision the WRC determined that the prison authorities had undertaken adequate measures to facilitate visits by the complainant's disabled son, such as by providing meeting rooms that were cleaned in advance. Moreover, it found that providing an escort for the complainant from the main prison to a separate unit for the purpose of visits, would constitute more than a nominal cost. According to the respondent, facilitating each such visit would involve recalling three officers on 'additional hours' for eight hours, but it did not provide a figure.¹⁹⁰

In a 2020 case, the WRC found that an airline had failed to provide reasonable accommodation to a passenger.¹⁹¹ When the complainant booked her flights, she indicated that she required wheelchair assistance. A wheelchair lift was provided for her outbound flight, but not for the return journey. Consequently, the complainant had to climb the steps to the aircraft aided by a minibus driver, which caused her pain, distress and humiliation. The respondent argued that it was not responsible for the incident because mobility assistance was contracted to the airport authority, and it had communicated the need for assistance to the contracted provider. The WRC found, however, that the obligation to do 'all that is reasonable' required the airline to act affirmatively in ensuring that the complainant was facilitated to access its service. It should have checked that a lift was available on the evening of the flight, and the crew should have requested the provider to supply the lift when the complainant was boarding. The respondent was directed to pay EUR 8 000 in compensation and to put in place a process to ensure that passengers who have requested assistance are provided with that service when boarding and disembarking.

Very few cases have failed solely on the nominal cost issue. The two main examples concern educational establishments. *Mrs A (on behalf of her son, B) v A Childcare Facility*¹⁹² concerned the admission of the complainant's child (B) to a crèche. The complainant was informed that a place would not be available unless the boy was accompanied by a full-time personal assistant, a requirement which the respondent maintained was necessary due to a combination of factors. The respondent referred to its obligations concerning child-staff ratios under childcare regulations and to the fact that, due to a disability, B was unable to physically move on his own without assistance. Government funding was available to provide five hours of assistance per week for the child, so the respondent could only accommodate B by employing another childcare worker. The Equality Tribunal accepted that the costs involved went beyond what was required under Section 4 ESA. Hiring an additional staff member in a private crèche that catered for some 30 children would have amounted to more than a nominal cost in an organisation of that size. In Regan v Old Bawn Community School,¹⁹³ the Tribunal found that the provision of sign language interpretation facilities by a community college would have exceeded the nominal cost ceiling. The respondent claimed that it was instructed by the Department of Education to run all of its part-time adult education programmes on a self-financing basis. For the year 2007/2008 a surplus of EUR 119.39 was generated from the entire adult education programme. Provision of a sign language interpreting service would have cost between EUR 1 300 and EUR 1 700. The equality officer accepted that evidence in finding that the school did not breach the provisions of Section 4.

f) Duties to provide reasonable accommodation in respect of other grounds

In Ireland, there is no legal duty to provide reasonable accommodation in respect of other grounds in the public and/or the private sector.

However, building on EU law principles, case law on direct discrimination in Ireland has established a modest form of reasonable accommodation in practice (see Chapter 2.2(a)). This development stems from the principle that direct discrimination may arise from a failure to afford different treatment to persons who are differently situated. To date, all cases have been on the race ground and have concerned migrant workers. In essence, employers may be obliged to modify certain employment practices to accommodate the needs of individuals who encounter linguistic and cultural difficulties in the workplace. The duty to modify employment practices is not, however, applicable to all migrant workers. Decisions have emphasised that the particular employee/s must essentially be in a 'potentially vulnerable position'.¹⁹⁴ In assessing whether migrant workers are in that position, adjudicators make reference to their capacity to understand the English language, their knowledge of employment rights and their ability to access support from families and other social networks.¹⁹⁵

3 PERSONAL AND MATERIAL SCOPE

3.1 Personal scope

3.1.1 EU and non-EU nationals (Recital 13 and Article 3(2), Directive 2000/43 and Recital 12 and Article 3(2), Directive 2000/78)

In Ireland, there are no residence or citizenship/nationality requirements for protection under the relevant national laws transposing the directives.

However, although EEA contains no express provision concerning employees who work outside the state, the Labour Court has found that an employee must habitually carry out their work in the jurisdiction in order to avail of its protection.¹⁹⁶ No such restrictions have been applied in the field of goods and services, which is governed by ESA.¹⁹⁷

It is unlikely that non-EU/EEA nationals working without an employment permit can invoke EEA, since their contract of employment will be void by reason of illegality.¹⁹⁸ Such persons are not, therefore, afforded protection from discrimination in employment. Persons with an irregular migration status should be able to invoke ESA, since their status will not generally be material in accessing goods or services. The matter has not been considered in case law, however.

Specific exceptions relating to treatment based on nationality are provided for under both ESA and EEA. These are discussed in greater detail in Chapter 4.4.

3.1.2 Natural and legal persons (Recital 16, Directive 2000/43)

a) Protection against discrimination

In Ireland, the personal scope of anti-discrimination law covers only natural persons for the purpose of protection against discrimination.

ESA and EEA do not specify which persons can avail of protection. However, an Equality Tribunal decision issued in 2008 made it clear that a legal person cannot avail of ESA to claim protection against discrimination.¹⁹⁹ The complainant in that case was an

However, the High Court subsequently ruled that non-EU/EEA nationals who do not have an employment permit, contrary to the Employment Permits Act 2003, have no legal standing to rely on employment legislation since their 'contract of employment' would be void by reason of illegality: Hussein v Labour Court [2012] IEHC 364, <http://www.bailii.org/ie/cases/IEHC/2012/H364.html>. The decision was reversed on appeal on technical grounds. Section 4 of the Employment Permits (Amendment) Act 2014 modified the impact of the High Court judgment somewhat. It permits a civil claim for compensation against the employer, notwithstanding the illegality of the contract, where it can be proved that the worker took all reasonable steps to comply with the requirement to have an employment permit: <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/eli/2014/act/26/section/4/enacted/en/html>. A 2019 Labour Court determination suggests that undocumented workers may not seek redress under employment rights legislation more generally: TA Hotels Limited t/a Lynams Hotel v Khoosye, RPD1916, 4 December 2019. unincorporated body of persons in the form of a choir called 'Gloria (Ireland's Lesbian and Gay Choir)'. It referred a claim of direct discrimination on the sexual orientation ground when the respondent removed the description of Gloria as Ireland's gay and lesbian choir from promotional material for a choral festival. Having considered several provisions in detail and various principles of interpretation, the equality officer concluded:

'Whilst the term 'person' is usually interpreted broadly to include corporate and unincorporated bodies, I am satisfied that a contrary intention is evident from the Equal Status Acts given the manner in which the discriminatory grounds are set out and the particular definition of 'person' as contained in the Acts. I am therefore of the view that the legislative intent in this regard was to protect individuals and not bodies from discrimination.'²⁰⁰

He reasoned that a body could not be of a particular gender, marital status, sexual orientation, religion and so on. In the context of identifying potential respondents under the Act, 'person' is defined in Section 2(1) as including 'an organisation, public body or other entity'. The Tribunal concluded that the Oireachtas thus intended that the wider definition of person should not apply to complainants. The net effect of the decision is that only natural persons can act as complainants under ESA. The same principles should apply to EEA, since the discriminatory grounds are set out in the same manner under both laws.²⁰¹ Members of an association could pursue a complaint under EEA or ESA, but it appears they would have to establish that they were discriminated against as individuals.²⁰²

b) Liability for discrimination

In Ireland, the personal scope of anti-discrimination law covers natural and legal persons for the purpose of liability for discrimination.

Section 8(1) EEA prohibits discrimination by both employers and employment agencies, which manifestly includes legal persons. Most of the discrimination prohibitions are explicitly directed at the employer.²⁰³ There is no provision for complaints against the person(s) who actually engaged in the impugned conduct, subject to a couple of exceptions: Section 14 imposes liability on the person responsible for procuring or attempting to procure discrimination, and Section 10 imposes liability on the person who displays or publishes discriminatory advertising.

Persons who are liable under ESA are defined in Section 2(1) as including organisations, public bodies or other entities. The terms of the Act clearly prohibit discrimination by both natural and legal persons.

²⁰¹ The core provision on protection from discrimination under EEA, Section 8(1), provides that 'an employer shall not discriminate against an employee or prospective employee and a provider of agency work shall not discriminate against an agency worker.' Section 2(1) defines an employee as 'a person' who works or has worked under a contract of employment and includes a member or former member of a regulatory body. That section also specifies that a contract of employment is one in which 'an individual agrees ... personally to execute any work or service.'

²⁰² Under Irish law, the general position is that an unincorporated association lacks a legal personality and so cannot be the subject of legal proceedings. Such bodies may, however, be conferred with the capacity to sue and be sued by legislation: Supreme Court, Sandymount and Merrion Residents Association v An Bord Pleanála [2013] IESC 51, 27 November 2013, https://www.courts.ie/view/judgments/802fc87d-4d99-4487-bde6-3caea034534e/6e83798d-ac2d-40c0-98ae-e68b069a708b/2013_IESC_51_1.pdf/pdf. In that case, the Supreme Court held that Section 50(A) of the Planning and Development Act 2000 conferred legal standing on unincorporated bodies to bring judicial review proceedings.

²⁰³ Section 15 EEA imposes vicarious liability on employers and principals for the acts of their employees and agents.

Natural persons and a 'body corporate' are liable to be prosecuted for offences under both equality laws.²⁰⁴

3.1.3 Private and public sector including public bodies (Article 3(1))

a) Protection against discrimination

In Ireland, the personal scope of national anti-discrimination law covers the private and public sectors, including public bodies, for the purpose of protection against discrimination.

Section 2(3) EEA indicates that private and public sector employees are protected by the Act, and this is reflected in case law. An exemption applies in relation to access to employment in another person's home for the provision of personal services, where the services affect private or family life.²⁰⁵ This may not conform to the provisions of the anti-discrimination directives. An exemption in relation to discrimination on the age or disability grounds applies with respect to employment in the Defence Forces.²⁰⁶

People accessing goods and services from either private or public sector bodies may avail of protection against discrimination under ESA.²⁰⁷ Section 6(2)(d) ESA exempts 'the provision of accommodation by a person in a part (other than a separate and self-contained part) of the person's home', even where the property is available for rent by members of the public.²⁰⁸ It is not clear whether this provision complies with the Racial Equality Directive.

b) Liability for discrimination

In Ireland, the personal scope of anti-discrimination law covers the private and public sectors, including public bodies, for the purpose of liability for discrimination.

Section 2(1) ESA expressly states that the persons who must not discriminate in the supply of goods and services include legal persons such as organisations, public bodies or other entities. Furthermore, the scope of EEA clearly covers the private and public sectors. The discrimination prohibitions are directed at 'employers',²⁰⁹ and Section 2(3) clarifies which entity constitutes the 'employer' for particular public sector employees.

3.2 Material scope

3.2.1 Conditions for access to employment, to self-employment or to occupation, including selection criteria, recruitment conditions and promotion, whatever the branch of activity and at all levels of the professional hierarchy (Article 3(1)(a))

In Ireland, national legislation prohibits discrimination in relation to conditions for access to employment, self-employment or occupation, including selection criteria, recruitment conditions and promotion, whatever the branch of activity and at all levels of the professional hierarchy, for the five grounds, and in both private and public sectors, as described in the directives.²¹⁰

The Equality Act 2004 amended the Employment Equality Act 1998 to extend the definition of 'contract of employment' to include those whereby 'an individual agrees with another person personally to execute any work or service for that person'.²¹¹ According to the authors of the main book on Irish employment equality law: 'Thus the scope of protection is wider than the traditional approach of employment law which limits protection to a person employed pursuant to a contract of employment, and is wide enough to cover self-employed persons as is required by the Race and Framework Directives'.²¹² In a 2019 case, the Labour Court affirmed that EEA must be interpreted as covering self-employed persons to ensure conformity with the directives.²¹³

Section 8 EEA provides that an employer shall not discriminate against an employee or prospective employee, and that a provider of agency work shall not discriminate against an agency worker in relation to, inter alia, access to employment, promotion or re-grading, and classification of posts.²¹⁴

In 2018, two female academics succeeded in age-ground complaints with respect to promotion. One of cases entailed an internal competition for appointment as a university's Dean of Teaching and Learning.²¹⁵ The complainant was 55 years of age at the time and the successful candidate was 15 years younger. A prima facie case was made, given the 'greater proximity' of the complainant's qualifications and experience to the job specification, and her 'comparable if not superior qualifications'. The respondent failed to rebut the presumption that age was a factor in the selection process, due to, inter alia, a lack of transparency in how the selection panel had evaluated the candidates. The complainant was awarded EUR 35 000 in compensation, the equivalent of six months' salary. The second case involved a paper-based promotion process for the position of Senior Lecturer.²¹⁶ The WRC concluded that age was a factor in the respondent's decision, in light of various pieces of evidence, including the relative achievements of the complainant and a comparator who was 20 years younger, as well as data on the age profiles of successful and unsuccessful candidates. The WRC ordered that the complainant be retrospectively promoted and awarded EUR 30 000 in compensation.

The definition of 'employee' under Section 2(1) EEA excludes, as far as access to employment is concerned, a person employed in another person's home to provide personal services such as childcare or domestic work. This may not be in compliance with the directives.

²¹⁰ Section 8 EEA applies to employers and providers of agency work. Section 11 applies to employment agencies, other than in their capacity as employers. Section 13 covers organisations of workers or of employers, trade or professional organisations, and bodies that control entry to or the carrying on of a profession, vocation, or occupation. Section 13A prohibits discrimination in respect of business partnerships.

²¹⁴ See <http://revisedacts.lawreform.ie/eli/1998/act/21/section/8/revised/en/html>. Section 8(5)(c) EEA was inserted by the Equality (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 2015. (c) by publishing or displaying, or causing to be published or displayed, an advertisement which contravenes section 10(1) in so far as such advertisement relates to access to employment.' Notwithstanding this development, a complaint about discriminatory advertising on the age ground was dismissed, because the adjudication officer concluded that the complainant did not have locus standi: Workplace Relations Commission, Carolan v Abrivia Recruitment, ADJ-00013092, 5 March 2019, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2019/march/adj-00013092.html>. 3.2.2 Employment and working conditions, including pay and dismissals (Article 3(1)(c))

In Ireland, national legislation prohibits discrimination in working conditions, including pay and dismissals,²¹⁷ for all five grounds and for both private and public employment.

Section 8 EEA provides that an employer shall not discriminate against an employee or prospective employee, and that a provider of agency work shall not discriminate against an agency worker, in relation to, inter alia, conditions of employment, terms of employment, working conditions, opportunities or facilities for employment counselling, training and work experience, overtime, shift work, short time, transfers, lay-offs, redundancies, dismissals and disciplinary measures.²¹⁸

Section 29 EEA sets out the entitlement to equal remuneration,²¹⁹ while Section 7 defines 'like work' for the purposes of equal pay.²²⁰ There were no successful equal pay cases across the five grounds in 2019.²²¹ In 2020, a race-ground complaint was upheld.²²² The complainant, a Russian national, was replaced by an Irish colleague while she was on maternity leave. The respondent accepted that the comparator was engaged in 'like work' and yet was paid EUR 15 000 more than the complainant. It argued that the disparity in remuneration was unrelated to the race ground; a higher salary was required to attract a suitable person on a temporary basis and the comparator was better qualified than the complainant. The WRC found that the respondent offered no evidence to support those contentions and could not rely on 'mere assertions' to rebut the presumption of discrimination established because employees of a different nationality were undertaking 'like work'. It awarded EUR 9 500 in compensation and instructed the respondent to increase the complainant's annual salary to EUR 45 000.

The definition of remuneration in Section 2(1) EEA specifically excludes pension rights – meaning a pension or any other benefits flowing from an occupational pension scheme – from its ambit. Instead, Parts VII²²³ and VIIA²²⁴ of the Pensions Acts 1990-2018 implement the principle of equal treatment with respect to occupational pensions. The Pensions Acts cover the same nine grounds as EEA: race, religious belief, gender, age, sexual orientation, civil status, family status, disability, and membership of the Traveller community. The legislation prohibits direct and indirect discrimination, discriminatory instructions and procurement to discriminate, as well as victimisation, in respect of occupational benefit schemes, occupational benefits and occupational pensions. Key exceptions include those ²¹⁷ Employees who are dismissed for putative discriminatory reasons may opt instead to pursue an unfair dismissals complaint under the Unfair Dismissals Acts 1997-2015: Ireland, Unfair Dismissals Act 1997, 6 April 1977; Ireland, Unfair Dismissals (Amendment) Act 1993, 14 July 1993. Revised text available at: <http://revisedacts.lawreform.ie/eli/1977/act/10/revised/en/html>. Under Section 6(2) of that legislation, 'the dismissal of an employee shall be deemed ... to be an unfair dismissal if it results wholly or mainly from one or more of the following: ... (b) the religious or political opinions of the employee ... (e) the race, colour or sexual orientation of the employee, (ee) the age of the employee, (eee) the employee's membership of the travelling community'.

'Red circling' arises where an employee is paid a higher than normal remuneration rate for a valid business reason. It is often designed, as it was in this case, to ensure that someone who is redeployed within a workplace is not subject to a pay cut. The WRC's determination was upheld on appeal to the Labour Court, Slaney Foods International v Adamczyk, EDA204, 15 January 2020, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2020/january/eda204.html>.

that provide for different treatment on the grounds of age²²⁵ and disability to take account of a lesser amount of work undertaken by virtue of a disability and to provide for more favourable treatment where early retirement arises from a disability.²²⁶

Many of the cases to date concern the gender and civil status grounds, but in one case a complainant who had been denied admittance to an occupational pension scheme succeeded in his claim of discrimination on grounds of race, and the company was ordered to register him in the scheme and to pay the contributions due.²²⁷ A discrimination complaint on the age, civil status and sexual orientation grounds did not succeed before the Equality Tribunal and was the subject of a reference to the CJEU.²²⁸ Mr Parris argued that the pension scheme operated by his employer was discriminatory, as it provided that an employee's partner would only be entitled to a survivor's pension in cases where the employee had married or entered a civil partnership before reaching the age of 60. National law prohibited the complainant from marrying and did not enable him to enter a civil partnership prior to his 60th birthday. It was, therefore, impossible for him to comply with the so-called survivor's rule in the pension scheme. His complaint before the Tribunal did not succeed. The Equality Officer concluded that the complainant had established indirect discrimination on the combined grounds of sexual orientation, civil status and age:

'I am satisfied that the complainant has established that the impact of the introduction of civil partnership only in 2011, combined with the limit placed upon his ability to regularise his civil status as a homosexual in an ongoing relationship prior to that point, when further combined with the difference in treatment based on age carried out in relation to this pension scheme renders the complainant at a particular disadvantage in relation to, for example, a heterosexual man of a similar age who would have had the opportunity to regularise a heterosexual relationship at a younger age.'²²⁹

He could not find in the complainant's favour, however, because to do so would convey retrospective effect on the Civil Partnership and Certain Rights and Obligations of Cohabitants Act 2010.

On appeal, the Labour Court referred three questions to the CJEU: whether the survivor rule was directly or indirectly discriminatory under Directive 2000/78/EC (1) on the ground of sexual orientation, (2) on the ground of age, or (3) if neither age nor sexual orientation applied in isolation, because of the combined effect of both. Each question was answered in the negative, leaving Dr Parris and others in his position without a remedy under either domestic or EU law.²³⁰ The Pensions Acts were amended in 2018 to rectify the situation. Part VIIA²³¹ provides that, if a member of an occupational pension scheme was in a committed relationship with a same-sex partner at the time they reached the age or date of retirement set out in the scheme rules and then married that partner within three years of the enactment of the Marriage Act 2015, they are deemed eligible for a survivor pension.

Three complaints under the Pensions Acts were determined in 2020. Two were dismissed for failure to refer within the six-month time limit.²³² A third case, referred on the race and disability grounds, failed because the respondent did not have an occupational pension scheme.²³³

Section 35 EEA is a cause of concern as it permits employers to pay employees with disabilities different rates of pay if they are restricted in their capacity to do the same amount of work or to work for the same amount of hours as a person who does not have a disability. This section contains only one limitation, which is that the employee should not be remunerated at a rate below the level required by the National Minimum Wage Act 2000.²³⁴ There is nothing to suggest that the work should be remunerated at a proportionate level to that of an employee without a disability. This may not comply with the directive.

3.2.3 Access to all types and all levels of vocational guidance, vocational training, advanced vocational training and retraining, including practical work experience (Article 3(1)(b))

In Ireland, national legislation prohibits discrimination in vocational training outside the employment relationship, such as adult lifelong learning courses or vocational training provided by technical schools or universities. Discrimination in these areas is prohibited on nine grounds: age, civil status, disability, family status, gender, race, religious belief, sexual orientation and membership of the Traveller community.

Sections 8(1) and 8(7) EEA prohibit discrimination in relation to training or experience for or in relation to employment. The employer is not permitted to refuse or not to afford the employee the same opportunities on any of the discriminatory grounds when it comes to 'employment counselling, training (whether on or off the job) and work experience.'

This provision is further reinforced by Section 12, which prohibits discrimination in vocational training on the nine discriminatory grounds. It is not permissible to discriminate in the provision of vocational training in relation to the terms on which the course or facility is offered, by refusing or omitting to afford access to any such course or facility, or in the manner in which any such course or facility is provided.²³⁵

Vocational training is defined, in Section 12(2), as:

'any system of instruction which enables a person being instructed to acquire, maintain, bring up to date or perfect the knowledge or technical capacity required for the carrying on of an occupational activity and which may be considered as exclusively concerned with training for such an activity.'

²³⁵ Section 12(1) EEA.

Courses that are exclusively concerned with training for an occupational activity are thus covered by EEA.²³⁶ According to the Labour Court,²³⁷ the definition may not align with the meaning of vocational training adopted by the CJEU in cases such as Case C-293/83, *Gravier v City of Liege*²³⁸ and Case C-24/86, Blaizot v University of Liege.²³⁹ It noted, however, that both judgments concerned the free movement principle in Regulation 1612/68 and it could not be assumed that a 'similarly expansive interpretation' of the term would be taken for the purpose of Directive 2000/43/EC. Other education and training courses are subject instead to the anti-discrimination provisions of the Equal Status Acts 2000-2018.²⁴⁰ Cumulatively, the provisions of both EEA and ESA cover the vocational programmes and work experience referred to under Article 3(1)(b). However, the narrow definition of vocational training under EEA may give rise to a compliance issue, since the duty to provide reasonable accommodation on the disability ground under ESA is less extensive than that required under Directive 2000/78.

An exception concerning the religion ground may raise compliance issues. Subsections 3-5 of Section 12 empower the relevant Minister, with the consent of the Minister for Children, Equality, Disability, Integration and Youth, to make an order reserving places on programmes of training for nurses and primary school teachers to persons of a certain religion. The exemption may be applied for by an educational or training body '[f]or the purposes of ensuring the availability of nurses to hospitals and teachers to primary schools which are under the direction or control of a body established for religious purposes or whose objectives include the provision of services in an environment which promotes certain religious values, and in order to maintain the religious ethos of the hospitals or primary schools.'²⁴¹ Pursuant to that section, the Employment Equality Act 1998 (Section 12) (Reservation of vocational training places) Order 2018 (S.I. No. 260 of 2018) permits Dublin City University to reserve 32 places in its Bachelor of Education degree programme for students who are members of the Church of Ireland or who belong to the broad Protestant tradition.²⁴² This provision may be too broad to comply with the terms of Article 4(2), since there is no requirement to demonstrate that the group of prospective teachers' religious beliefs constitute a genuine, legitimate and justified occupational requirement.

3.2.4 Membership of, and involvement in, an organisation of workers or employers, or any organisation whose members carry on a particular profession, including the benefits provided for by such organisations (Article 3(1)(d))

In Ireland, national legislation prohibits discrimination in relation to membership of and involvement in workers' or employers' organisations, as formulated in the directives for all five grounds and for both private and public employment.

Section 13(1) EEA prohibits discrimination on all five grounds in relation to organisations of workers or of employers, trade or professional organisations, and bodies that control entry to or the carrying on of a profession, vocation or occupation. This provision relates both to membership of the body in question and to any benefits provided by that body, with the exception of pension rights, which fall instead under the ambit of Parts VII and VIIA of the Pensions Acts 1990-2018. Section 13(2) EEA outlaws discriminatory advertising by such bodies. Section 13A prohibits discrimination in respect of business partnerships.

3.2.5 Social protection, including social security and healthcare (Article 3(1)(e) Directive 2000/43)

In Ireland, national legislation prohibits discrimination in social protection, including social security and healthcare, as formulated in the Racial Equality Directive.

Discrimination in this area is prohibited on all EU grounds as well as on the grounds of civil status, family status and membership of the Traveller community (which overlaps with the race ground).²⁴³

Under Section 5(1) ESA: 'A person shall not discriminate in disposing of goods to the public generally or a section of the public or in providing a service, whether the disposal or provision is for consideration or otherwise and whether the service provided can be availed of only by a section of the public.' 'Service' means a service or facility of any nature, which is available to the public generally or a section of the public (Section 2(1)). The legislation does not refer specifically to social protection, healthcare or social security.²⁴⁴ However, the first instance forum, the Equality Tribunal (now the Workplace Relations Commission) interpreted the definition of 'service' to include social protection from the outset.²⁴⁵ For example, cases have upheld discrimination in relation to social welfare payments such as rent supplement²⁴⁶ and have established that allowances for people with disabilities are 'services'.²⁴⁷ Healthcare is also covered.²⁴⁸

The main compliance concern in this regard concerns the exemption provided for under Section 14(1)(a)(i) ESA, which provides:

'Nothing in this Act shall be construed as prohibiting—
(a) the taking of any action that is required by or under—
(i) any enactment or order of a court.'

The word 'enactment' is not defined in ESA. It covers Acts of the Oireachtas and statutory instruments,²⁴⁹ but not Government department circulars and other administrative rules.²⁵⁰

²⁴³ Section 3(2) ESA.

²⁴⁴ Discrimination in the context of social housing provision is prohibited under Section 6 ESA. See Chapter 3.2.9.

²⁵⁰ See, for example, Circuit Court Dublin, Health Service Executive v Quigley (Linnane J., unreported, 26 April 2010).

Where some element of discretion exists in relation to the granting of a benefit, other good or service, the statutory exemption is inapplicable, since it relates only to discriminatory treatment required by law.²⁵¹ However, where the putative discriminatory treatment is required by law, Section 14(1)(a)(i) operates to remove the measure from the ambit of ESA. Several challenges to social protection provisions have failed on that basis.²⁵² In 2016, for example, the WRC determined that it did not have jurisdiction to assess a discrimination complaint about eligibility for a medical card because the criteria are set out in legislation.²⁵³

Since the Racial Equality Directive does not envisage any blanket exemption for discriminatory measures required by law, it is questionable whether Section 14(1)(a)(i) conforms to its terms.

Judicial interpretation will be crucial in determining whether Ireland is in compliance with Directive 2000/43/EC. Pending such interpretation, it is not possible to say definitively whether Ireland is in compliance with the Racial Equality Directive.²⁵⁴

a) Article 3(3) exception (Directive 2000/78)

Irish law does not rely on the exception in Article 3.3 of the Employment Equality Directive in relation to religion or belief, age, disability and sexual orientation.

3.2.6 Social advantages (Article 3(1)(f) Directive 2000/43)

In Ireland, national legislation does not expressly prohibit discrimination in social advantages, as formulated in the Racial Equality Directive.

The term 'social advantage' is not expressly referred to under ESA. Section 2(1) defines 'service' as including 'facilities for (i) banking, insurance, grants, loans, credit or financing, (ii) entertainment, recreation or refreshment, (iii) cultural activities, or (iv) transport or travel'. Case law establishes that 'service'²⁵⁵ encompasses a broad category of benefits provided by public and private actors such as free travel passes on public transport,²⁵⁶ maintenance grants for third-level students²⁵⁷ and sports scholarships.²⁵⁸ However, a Circuit Court judgment concerning an ex gratia payment scheme set up by the Irish Government to compensate people affected by the liberalisation of the taxi industry has cast some doubt on the applicability of anti-discrimination law to social advantages provided by the public sector.²⁵⁹ The Court found that 'the Tribunal had no jurisdiction to entertain the complaint because to do so was "in effect, to purport to review a decision of the Government, which ... falls outside the scope of the powers conferred on it by the 2000 Act"'.²⁶⁰ Furthermore, discrimination complaints concerning social advantages may fail because they are covered by the exemption for treatment required by law under Section 14(1)(a) (see Chapter 3.2.5).²⁶¹ It is not clear, therefore, whether national law complies fully with the Racial Equality Directive.

3.2.7 Education (Article 3(1)(g) Directive 2000/43)

In Ireland, national legislation prohibits discrimination in education, as formulated in the Racial Equality Directive.

Section 7 ESA covers educational establishments. 'Educational establishment' is broadly defined, covering pre-school services through to higher-level institutions, whether or not they are supported by public funds. Public and private establishments providing educational services are therefore covered. Discrimination on nine grounds is prohibited in respect of admission to the terms or conditions of admission of a person as a student to the establishment; the access of a student to any course, facility or benefit provided by the establishment; any other term or condition of participation in the establishment by a student; or the expulsion of a student from the establishment or any other sanction against the student. The grounds covered are gender, age, race, religion, family status, disability, civil status, sexual orientation and membership of the Traveller community.²⁶²

Section 7 only refers to students or prospective students. However, other people, such as parents of pupils, can refer cases against schools or other educational establishments under Section 5 (provided they are accessing a service, good or facility).²⁶³ The Department of Education and Skills is not an 'educational establishment' but may be regarded as providing goods and services under Section 5, as may other entities involved in providing facilities or setting policies in the area of education.²⁶⁴

Case law has dealt with the accommodation of disabled students²⁶⁵ and broader questions of access across all levels of the education system.²⁶⁶ In a 2015 race-ground case, a criterion in a school admissions policy contravened the indirect discrimination prohibition. The criterion accorded priority to prospective students based on their date of application. The complainant, as an adopted child of Chinese national and ethnic origins, was not in the same position to submit her application as early applicants of Irish national origins who were not adopted. Her mother was unable to apply for a place close to the complainant's birth date due to the fact that the adoption process was not concluded until the complainant was 16 months old. Evidence was presented to the effect that 82 % of non-family adoptions involved children of a non-Irish national origin and that such adoptions took between six and 24 months to complete. The Tribunal found that the provision put the complainant and foreign adopted children generally at a particular disadvantage compared with Irish-born children.²⁶⁷ It concluded that, while the admission criterion pursued the legitimate aim of operating a fair and reasonable admissions policy, the respondent did not establish that the provision was necessary to achieve that aim.

There was no case law on the race or Traveller community grounds in 2020.

Discrimination in access to schools has raised compliance issues in the past. In a high-profile case, the Supreme Court overturned an earlier decision of the Equality Tribunal and ruled that a school admission policy that prioritised former pupils' children did not constitute indirect discrimination against Travellers.²⁶⁸ It determined that the evidence presented by the complainant did not demonstrate that the school's policy placed Travellers in a situation of particular disadvantage. In effect, the Court held that statistical evidence was required in order to establish a prima facie case; it did not consider EU law in assessing the ESA prohibition of indirect discrimination. In its amicus curiae submission, the Equality Authority argued that the indirect discrimination test should conform to that of the Racial Equality Directive.²⁶⁹ The Supreme Court, however, applied a test formulated with reference to the provisions of the domestic statute (ESA) and did not consider whether Travellers constitute an ethnic group for the purposes of EU law.

School admissions criteria are liable to place migrant children at a particular disadvantage, given that many of them will have not been resident in the country for equivalent periods of time to their Irish national counterparts. For instance, preferences for applicants with parents or other relatives who attended the school (as in Stokes) or a requirement that one has been resident in the local area for a certain period²⁷⁰ could have an exclusionary effect on migrants.

Discrimination in accessing schools has been the subject of extensive debate over the past decade in particular. International human rights bodies²⁷¹ and IHREC²⁷² had recommended amending ESA, and in 2017 the Government undertook a consultation process on the role of religion in school admissions.²⁷³ A significant number of NGOs campaigned on the question of school admission policies, providing impetus to the reform of the legal framework effected in 2018.²⁷⁴ Several changes aimed at addressing discrimination in accessing schools were enacted under the Education (Admission to Schools) Act 2018.²⁷⁵

The 2018 Act effected a reform which should improve the situation encountered in Stokes. Oversubscribed schools are now not permitted to allocate more than 25 % of places to the children of past pupils. The Act further provides for the phasing out of school waiting lists, which should ensure that children who move to a new area are not disadvantaged in the future.

The 2018 Act also amended Section 7 ESA, so that primary schools can no longer use religion as a selection criterion, in most cases.²⁷⁶ This change in the law still allows schools of minority religions to give preference to a student who seeks admission to a school providing religious instruction or education consistent with his or her minority religious beliefs, but only where the school is oversubscribed. Prior to this reform, denominational schools were permitted to distinguish between prospective students on the basis of their religious background. They were also entitled to refuse admission to a child who was not of that denomination where it was essential to maintain the ethos of the school.²⁷⁷

In recent years, several NGOs raised concerns about the use of reduced timetables (reduced school hours) in relation to vulnerable pupils, including children with disabilities, as well as Traveller and Roma children.²⁷⁸ The matter was considered by a parliamentary committee in 2019,²⁷⁹ and the Department of Education and Skills prepared draft guidelines

Part X also obliges schools to prepare and publish an admissions policy which stipulates, inter alia, that the school does not discriminate on the nine grounds provided for under ESA.

²⁷⁶ Section 11, Education (Admission to Schools) Act 2018.

on the use of reduced timetables. Consultation with education stakeholders was undertaken in 2020, and revised guidelines are due to be published in 2021.²⁸⁰ The aim of the guidelines will be 'to ensure that the use of reduced timetables is limited solely to those circumstances where it is absolutely necessary'. It is envisaged that schools will be obliged to notify a statutory agency, Tusla Education Support Service, when a reduced timetable is proposed. This will allow the use of reduced timetables to be monitored and the extent of their use to be ascertained.²⁸¹

School closures and the transition to online learning for significant periods across 2020, as necessitated by the COVID-19 pandemic, had a particularly adverse impact on children with disabilities.²⁸² The Government adopted several ameliorative measures, including funding for a more extensive summer education programme²⁸³ and the provision of additional educational resources for home learning through the National Council for Special Education.²⁸⁴ However, NGOs have argued that additional supports are required to 'counter regressions experienced during the pandemic'.²⁸⁵ Allied to this, NGOs continue to seek the commencement of the provisions in the Education for Persons with Special Educational Needs Act 2004 that provide for individual education plans and an appeals mechanism.²⁸⁶

a) Trends and patterns regarding Roma pupils

In Ireland, limited data is available as to whether there are specific legal or societal trends and/or patterns in education regarding Roma pupils, such as segregation. The Department of Education's Report and Recommendations for a Traveller Education Strategy (2006)²⁸⁷ led to the desegregation of education for Traveller pupils. One of the two remaining Traveller-only schools closed in 2019.²⁸⁸

There is no case law to date on discrimination against Roma pupils. Members of the Irish Traveller community have referred several cases against schools.²⁸⁹

A National Roma Needs Assessment was published in 2018.²⁹⁰ It suggests that Roma pupils' participation in education is affected by high levels of poverty and poor accommodation. Segregation was not reported as an issue, save that 'due to lack of literacy and language skills many older children are placed in classes with younger peers.'²⁹¹ The report calls for further research on the experiences of Roma children in education. The Irish education system has yet to develop a culturally appropriate response to specific issues relating to Roma. No reference is made to Roma in the main policy document, the Intercultural Education Strategy 2010 – 2015.²⁹²

Training in the area of intercultural education is not compulsory for qualified teachers, and there remains an absence of curriculum-linked resources that explore Traveller and Roma language and culture.²⁹³ In 2018, a private members' bill was introduced to the Irish Parliament that aims to formally include Traveller culture and history in the school curriculum.²⁹⁴ At the end of 2020, the bill had reached Second Stage before Dáil Éireann (the lower house of the Oireachtas). In response to that initiative, the Minister for Education and Skills requested the National Council for Curriculum and Assessment (NCCA) to conduct an audit of Traveller culture and history in the current school curriculum. The audit, which incorporated consultation with Traveller representative groups, was published in 2019.²⁹⁵

Researchers have criticised the failure to address racism in school curricula more generally.²⁹⁶ A large quantitative study canvassing the attitudes of 4 970 Irish national post-primary students concluded that the 'levels of reported negativity towards Irish Travellers are disturbing and need to be urgently addressed by our education system.'²⁹⁷ National data suggests that migrant and Traveller children are more likely to experience bullying in school.²⁹⁸ Anti-bullying procedures, published in 2013, include a template for schools to record incidents.²⁹⁹ 'However the completion of this template is not compulsory and there does not appear to be any intention to inspect these reports as part of the whole school evaluation process. This makes it all but impossible for the State to monitor in any real way the incident of identity-based bullying in schools.'³⁰⁰ The National Traveller and Roma Inclusion Strategy 2017–2021, published in June 2017, contains commitments to

3.2.8 Access to and supply of goods and services that are available to the public (Article 3(1)(h) Directive 2000/43)

In Ireland, national legislation prohibits discrimination in access to and the supply of goods and services, as formulated in the Racial Equality Directive.

Section 5(1) ESA provides:

‘A person shall not discriminate in disposing of goods to the public generally or a section of the public or in providing a service, whether the disposal or provision is for consideration or otherwise and whether the service provided can be availed of only by a section of the public.’

The discriminatory grounds are those of gender, age, race, religion, family status, disability, civil status, sexual orientation and membership of the Traveller community (Section 3(2)).

‘Goods’ are defined in Section 2(1) as ‘any articles of movable property’ (i.e. property apart from land), and this definition has not been contentious in the case law to date.

Section 2(1) defines ‘service’ as ‘a service or facility of any nature which is available to the public generally or a section of the public, and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing, includes—

(a) access to and the use of any place,

(b) facilities for—

(i) banking, insurance, grants, loans, credit or financing,

(ii) entertainment, recreation or refreshment,

(iii) cultural activities, or

(iv) transport or travel,

(c) a service or facility provided by a club (whether or not it is a club holding a certificate of registration under the Registration of Clubs Acts, 1904 to 1999) which is available to the public generally or a section of the public, whether on payment or without payment, and

(d) a professional or trade service, but does not include pension rights (within the meaning of the Employment Equality Act 1998) or a service or facility in relation to which that Act applies.’

The services listed above are not exhaustive, and case law has established that the definition covers, inter alia, maintenance grants payable to students,³⁰³ visits of family members to prisons³⁰⁴ and the conduct of quasi-judicial proceedings.³⁰⁵ In a 2020 decision, the WRC found that religious services or sacraments are not services for the purposes of Section 2(1) ESA.³⁰⁶ It reasoned that, had the Oireachtas intended to include such ceremonies, it would have done so expressly. Otherwise, it would be unlawful for churches to refuse to marry divorced people or same-gender couples. Complaints of direct discrimination on the Traveller community, race and gender grounds pertaining to the exclusion of Traveller women from a Catholic communion mass were, therefore, dismissed.

Failure to adapt the provision of goods or services to meet the needs of a person with a disability is a form of discrimination.³⁰⁷

a) Distinction between goods and services available publicly or privately

In Ireland, national law does not distinguish between goods and services that are available to the public (e.g. in shops, restaurants and banks) and those that are only available privately (e.g. those restricted to members of a private association).

The discrimination prohibition applies where goods or services are supplied to 'the public generally' or to 'a section of the public'.³⁰⁸ Case law has established that members of private associations, such as trade unions,³⁰⁹ clubs³¹⁰ and political parties,³¹¹ constitute a 'section of the public' for the purposes of ESA.

However, distinct provisions govern registered clubs, which are bodies that have applied for or hold a certificate of registration under the Registration of Clubs Acts 1904–1999.³¹² Registration enables clubs to sell alcohol to members and certain visitors. Clubs that do not hold a liquor licence are governed instead by the general prohibition on discrimination set out under Section 5 ESA. Sections 8 to 10 ESA apply exclusively to registered clubs. These provisions only relate to matters concerning membership of clubs, and cases must be taken before the District Court.³¹³ Clubs which have the principal purpose of catering for the needs of persons who are members of the Traveller community or people of a particular gender, sexual orientation, religious belief (or persons of no religious belief), family status, civil status, age, disability or nationality or ethnic or national origin can restrict membership to people from those groups (Section 9). The 'race' and 'colour' aspects of the race ground are not exempt. Further, the Traveller community exception is asymmetrical. It remains to be seen whether these provisions comply with the Racial Equality Directive. Recital 17 envisages the establishment of 'organisations of persons of a particular racial or ethnic origin where their main object is the promotion of the special needs of those persons' as positive action measures. However, the Irish Superior Courts have not taken account of disadvantage or substantive equality of opportunity principles in construing relevant provisions of ESA. The High Court interpreted Section 9 of that Act as permitting male-only membership in golf clubs, holding that the principal purpose of such clubs is to cater for the needs of men.³¹⁴ The Supreme Court upheld the decision on 4 November 2009.³¹⁵

3.2.9 Housing (Article 3(1)(h) Directive 2000/43)

In Ireland, national legislation prohibits discrimination in the area of housing as formulated in the Racial Equality Directive.

Section 6(1) ESA prohibits discrimination in disposing of any estate or interest in premises, in terminating any tenancy or other interest in premises, or in the provision of accommodation and related services and amenities. The grounds of gender, age, race, religion, family status, disability, civil status, sexual orientation and membership of the Traveller community are covered (Section 3(2)). The Equality (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 2015 introduced 'housing assistance' as a new ground to protect against discrimination in the accommodation context.³¹⁶ As of 1 January 2016, people in receipt of housing assistance, rent supplement or other social welfare payments cannot be discriminated against in relation to the provision of accommodation and related services and amenities. Over the past four years, cases concerning private sector housing have been referred almost exclusively on the housing assistance ground. One complaint on the race ground was determined in 2020.³¹⁷ The WRC found that a landlord harassed the complainant when he made racist remarks in conversations with her about replacement tenants (see case summary in Chapter 12.2).

A few complaints on the Traveller community ground have been referred against private landlords and estate agents since the enactment of ESA.³¹⁸ However, the bulk of complaints on that ground pertain to public housing authorities. One such complaint was upheld in 2020, in which a housing authority declined a Traveller man's application for social housing. The complainant was treated less favourably than a settled person would have been treated. The respondent's decision was based on an unsubstantiated allegation of anti-social behaviour, and the complainant was not afforded the opportunity to contest it (see case summary in Chapter 12.2). The complainants in a 2018 case lost their home on a halting site as a result of an arson attack.³¹⁹ The discrimination complaint pertained to their subsequent dealings with the local authority as to their housing situation. The respondent council advised the family to return to the halting site where their caravan was burned down, which they refused to do because of safety concerns given the previous incident. Instead, the complainants resorted to parking by the side of the road and were issued with notices from the respondent to desist from this. While the adjudication officer expressed considerable sympathy for the complainants, a discrimination complaint could not be made out. The WRC was precluded from investigating the notices to move from the roadside encampments, since these were issued under an enactment and were thus covered by the Section 14(1)(a)(i) exemption. In relation to the respondent's offer of accommodation on the same site, it was not established that a homeless non-Traveller family would have been treated more favourably. The complainants had been offered a rudimentary form of accommodation: 'Crime, intimidation and catastrophic events happen in one community as much as in the other and providing appropriate assistance can put great stress on public resources.' An indirect discrimination complaint concerning the council's failure to implement its policies on Traveller accommodation was unsuccessful, since indirect discrimination addresses measures of general application and is 'not engaged when it comes to policies or rules which are designed for a specific minority community.'

Several exceptions apply to the prohibition of discrimination in the area of housing.

For example, the prohibition of discrimination does not apply to accommodation that is provided in a person's home, 'or where the provision of accommodation affects the person's private or family life or that of any other person residing in the home.'³²⁰

Section 6(5) permits the reservation of housing for use by particular categories of people, for example a home for people with disabilities or a retirement or nursing home for older people.

Housing authorities may treat people differently in respect of accommodation on the basis of their family size, family status, civil status, disability, age or membership of the Traveller community, in accordance with Section 6(6) ESA. The Circuit Court has clarified that this exception cannot result in less favourable treatment in the provision of housing.³²¹

Section 6(7) allows the Minister to apply differential treatment in housing provision to persons on the basis of their nationality, gender, family size, family status, civil status, disability, age or membership of the Traveller community.³²² Any such difference in treatment is not permitted to amount to a derogation from the obligations of the state under EU law. There has been no case law on the provision to date.

Available data, in the form of experience of perceived discrimination, suggests that black non-Irish nationals are a high-risk group for encountering discriminatory practices in accessing accommodation,³²³ while a 2014 survey based on 400 interviews conducted with landlords found that 95 % of the landlords who responded would rent to non-Irish nationals.³²⁴

a) Trends and patterns regarding housing segregation for Roma

In Ireland, there is limited data concerning trends and/or patterns of housing segregation and discrimination against the Roma.

A National Roma Needs Assessment, commissioned by the Department of Justice and Equality, was published in 2018.³²⁵ According to the report, an estimated 4 000 to 5 000 Roma people live in Ireland. Approximately 20 % of the Irish Roma community are 'completely marginalised from services and supports. They are living in extreme poverty, in sub-standard accommodation', and 60 % of respondents reported experiences of consistent poverty, including not always having enough fuel, food or heat. Furthermore, 93 % of respondents reported experiencing discrimination in accessing housing. Among the other major issues identified were severe overcrowding; poor-quality accommodation; a lack of security of tenure; homelessness; and a lack of access to social housing and housing-related social protection payments.

³²⁰ Section 6(2)(d) ESA. The first cases to consider that exemption were heard in 2018: Workplace Relations Commission, Bushe v Jarvis, ADJ-00014453, 6 September 2018, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2018/September/ADJ-00014453.html> (since the respondent was seeking to rent a room in his home, the WRC did not have jurisdiction to hear the discrimination complaint in accordance with Section 6(2)(d)); A Tenant v A Landlord, ADJ-00015004, 5 December 2018, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2018/december/adj-00015004.html> (the rental unit was self-contained and therefore the exemption was inapplicable).

A report on Discrimination and Inequality in Housing in Ireland was published by the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission and the Economic and Social Research Institute in June 2018.³²⁶ It examines inequality and discrimination while searching for housing; whether certain groups experience poorer housing conditions; and the prevalence of homelessness across different groups. The groups considered correspond to the ESA discriminatory grounds, with the exception of sexual orientation, because of a lack of data. According to the report, Travellers experience the highest risk of homelessness, making up 9 % of the homeless population even though Travellers comprise just 1 % of the overall population. Travellers also experience the highest levels of discrimination. They are almost 10 times as likely to report discrimination in access to housing as the white Irish population.

The findings of a small-scale study on Experiences of Travellers in the Private Rented Sector, published in 2017, suggest that Travellers experience discrimination at the hands of landlords and settled neighbours.³²⁷ Landlords believed that discrimination had diminished in recent years due to compliance with legislation. However, a 2014 survey conducted on behalf of the Residential Tenancies Board, based on 400 telephone interviews conducted with landlords, found that 82 % of those landlords who responded were unwilling to rent property to members of the Travelling community.³²⁸

The European Committee of Social Rights upheld a complaint against Ireland in 2015, finding that a shortfall in sufficient accommodation for Travellers, as well as inadequate site conditions, violated Article 16 of the European Social Charter.³²⁹ Underlying factors include a disinvestment in Traveller accommodation since 2008, coupled with the failure of local authorities to access available funds. The Housing (Traveller Accommodation) Act 1998 obliges each local authority to prepare, adopt and implement a five-year rolling accommodation programme to meet the existing and projected accommodation needs of Travellers in their areas.³³⁰ Between 2008 and 2018, just 66 % of the capital budget allocated by the Government was drawn down by local authorities.³³¹ In its June 2019 report, the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance stated that it was 'shocked' that this pattern of underspending continues 'while many Travellers continue to live in squalor and deprivation'.³³² It recommended that Ireland impose sanctions on local authorities for failure to spend funding or transferring responsibility to a central housing commission. The national budget for 2020 allocated EUR 14.5 million to Traveller-specific accommodation, an increase of EUR 1.5 million on the previous year.³³³ All of the funding was accessed by local authorities, in a break from the pattern for previous years. Instead of being allocated a fixed budget, the authorities drew down funds on a case-by-case basis from the general allocation. IHREC welcomed this development but noted that almost one third of the new accommodation units provided for Travellers in 2020 were COVID-19

mobile units for self-isolation purposes, 'rather than secure and adequate housing that will meet the accommodation needs of Traveller families in the medium to long term'.³³⁴

The Oireachtas Committee on Housing and Homelessness issued several recommendations in 2016, including a ban on evictions where alternative accommodation is unavailable and a mechanism for enforcing local authorities' duties under the 1998 Act.³³⁵ In 2016, the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child called for increased funding for accommodation facilities that address the needs of Traveller and Roma children and their families and the amendment or repeal of legislation that criminalises nomadism.³³⁶

To date, the Government has not implemented the bulk of those recommendations. There are no plans to reform the laws that enable evictions. However, an expert group was established in 2018 to conduct a review of the 1998 Act, following a commitment set out under the National Traveller and Roma Inclusion Strategy 2017–2021.³³⁷ Its report was published in July 2019 and sets out 32 recommendations, including proposals aimed at addressing the collection of data on and systems for identifying accommodation needs, the planning system, resources and delivery capacity, and governance arrangements.³³⁸ It identifies a need for active and ongoing monitoring of the planning and provision of Traveller accommodation and intervention when these functions are not being adequately performed. To that end, it recommends that the National Traveller Accommodation Consultative Committee (NTACC) be equipped with additional powers and resources and should be retitled as the National Traveller Accommodation Authority. The report further calls for reform of the law on trespass and evictions, referencing violations of the European Social Charter.³³⁹

The Department of Housing, Planning and Local Government (DHPLG) is consulting with the NTACC on the Expert Review Group's proposals and has established subject matter working groups within the Department to progress the recommendations. A programme board was established in December 2020 with responsibility for overseeing implementation of the recommendations.³⁴⁰

4 EXCEPTIONS

4.1 Genuine and determining occupational requirements (Article 4)

In Ireland, national legislation provides for an exception for genuine and determining occupational requirements.

Under Section 37(2) EEA:

'[A] difference of treatment which is based on a characteristic related to any of the discriminatory grounds ... shall not constitute discrimination where, by reason of the particular occupational activities concerned or of the context in which they are carried out -

- (a) the characteristic constitutes a genuine and determining occupational requirement, and
- (b) the objective is legitimate, and the requirement proportionate.'

To date, this provision has been considered in only a limited number of cases, and so its ambit is as yet unclear.³⁴¹ In a case concerning access to employment, the Equality Tribunal found that meeting a prescribed hearing standard could constitute a genuine and determining occupational requirement for bus drivers. However, the standard set by the respondent was particularly onerous and was not applied internationally. Moreover, compliance with that standard was not monitored in relation to its existing workforce, so the respondent could not demonstrate that the requirement was objectively justified.³⁴² The exception has also featured in age-ground case law concerning compulsory retirement, although the decisions largely rested on analyses of the provision that permits employers to set retirement ages (Section 34(4) EEA). The main precedent is Saunders v CHC Ireland Ltd., in which a retirement age of 55 for a category of emergency services personnel (helicopter winch operators) was justified under Section 37(2) and Section 34(4).³⁴³ Applying the Wolf judgment, the adjudicator accepted that the possession of a high physical capacity was a genuine and determining occupational requirement for the role and that this standard of capacity diminishes with age.³⁴⁴

Under Section 5(2)(i) ESA, the prohibition of discrimination in disposing of goods or in providing a service does not apply in the case of 'differences in the treatment of persons on the gender, age or disability ground or on the ground of race, reasonably required for reasons of authenticity, aesthetics, tradition or custom in connection with a dramatic performance or other entertainment.' To date there is no case law on this exception. It would presumably allow the selection of a person of a particular ethnicity, for example, to play a role where being of that ethnicity was reasonably required.

³⁴¹ A parallel provision that applies to the gender ground only, Section 25 EEA, has been applied in a number of cases. See, for example, Equality Tribunal, A Prospective Employee v A Company, DEC-E2015-101, 7 October 2015, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2015/October/DEC-E2015-101.html>.

4.2 Employers with an ethos based on religion or belief (Article 4(2) Directive 2000/78)

In Ireland, national law provides for an exception for employers with an ethos based on religion or belief.

Section 37(1) EEA provides:

'Subject to subsections (1A) and (1B), a religious, educational or medical institution which is under the direction or control of a body established for religious purposes or whose objectives include the provision of services in an environment which promotes certain religious values shall not be taken to discriminate against a person ... if—

(a) it gives more favourable treatment, on the religion ground, to an employee or a prospective employee over that person where it is reasonable to do so in order to maintain the religious ethos of the institution, or

(b) it takes action which is reasonably necessary to prevent an employee or a prospective employee from undermining the religious ethos of the institution.'³⁴⁵

Further subsections ensure that state-funded entities may only avail of the exception in circumstances that cohere with Article 4(2) Directive 2000/78:

'(1A) Where an educational or medical institution referred to in subsection (1) is maintained, in whole or in part, by monies provided by the Oireachtas more favourable treatment on the religion ground referred to in paragraph (a) of that subsection shall be taken to be discrimination unless —

(a) that treatment does not constitute discrimination on any of the other discriminatory grounds, and

(b) by reason of the nature of the institution's activities or the context in which the activities are being carried out, the religion or belief of the employee or prospective employee constitutes a genuine, legitimate and justified occupational requirement having regard to the institution's ethos.

(1B) Where an educational or medical institution referred to subsection (1) is maintained, in whole or in part, by monies provided by the Oireachtas, action of the type referred to in paragraph (b) of that subsection shall be taken to be discrimination unless by reason of the nature of the employment concerned or the context in which it is carried out —

(a) the action is objectively justified by the institution's aim of preventing the undermining of the religious ethos of the institution, and

(b) the means of achieving that aim are appropriate and necessary.

(1C) An action referred to in subsection (1B) shall not be objectively justified in accordance with paragraph (a) of that subsection, or appropriate and necessary in accordance with paragraph (b) of that subsection, unless the action of the institution is —

(a) rationally and strictly related to the institution's religious ethos,

(b) a response to conduct of the employee or prospective employee undermining the religious ethos of the institution rather than a response to that employee's, or prospective employee's, gender, civil status, family status, sexual orientation, age, disability, race or membership of the Traveller community, and

(c) proportionate to the conduct of the employee or prospective employee, as the case may be, having due regard to —

(i) any other action the employer may take in the circumstances,

(ii) the consequences of that action for that employee or prospective employee,

(iii) the employee's or prospective employee's right to privacy, and ³⁴⁵ See <http://revisedacts.lawreform.ie/eli/1998/act/21/revised/en/html#SEC37>. See also Workplace Relations Commission, Hogan v The Young Women's Christian Association, DEC-E2015-151, December 2015, <https://www.workplacelrelations.ie/en/cases/2015/december/dec-e2015-151.html>.

(iv) the actual damage caused to the religious ethos of the institution by the conduct of that employee or prospective employee.’

The exception was inserted by the Equality (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 2015, which came into force on 1 January 2016 and has yet to be considered in case law. It replaced a provision that did not appear to comply with Article 4(2) since, inter alia, there was no requirement that differential treatment should be ‘legitimate’ or ‘proportionate’, nor did it explicitly provide that the exception could not be used to justify discrimination on another ground.

The previous provision, although never fully tested in legal proceedings (see below), was controversial at the national level. Teachers’ unions opposed the exemption from the outset arguing, in particular, that it would impact on lesbian, gay and bisexual staff.³⁴⁶ Those concerns were reinforced by a small-scale research study, which found that the exemption caused considered anxiety on the part of such teachers and affected their ability to ‘come out’ at work.³⁴⁷ The Equality Authority and the Irish Human Rights Commission had also called for its amendment.³⁴⁸

The former provision was considered in a case in which a primary school discriminated against a teacher on the grounds of religion and age in respect of promotion to the position of principal.³⁴⁹ In the course of an interview, the complainant had been questioned about her views on religious patronage of schools and pluralism in education. The Labour Court found that the questioning amounted to discrimination on the ground of religion. The Court rejected the respondent’s contention that Section 37 allowed the interview panel to do so without infringing the principle of equal treatment on grounds of religion. Noting that Section 37 must be interpreted and applied in conformity with Directive 2000/78/EC and ‘ascribed a narrow ambit’ as an exception to the general prohibition of discrimination, the Court reasoned as follows:

‘The question of whether the preferment of candidates by reference to their religious belief is justified in a particular case is a matter of evidence to be adduced by the person seeking to rely on the exception that the statute provides. In the instant case the Respondent did not adduce any evidence on which it could be held that the canvassing of the private views of candidates for the post in issue on the question of religious patronage and pluralism was reasonable or necessary in order to maintain the religious ethos of the school. Nor was there any evidence to suggest that whatever views the Complainant had on that topic would impact on her capacity to act in good faith and with loyalty to the school’s Catholic ethos.’

The Labour Court’s approach suggests that the previous provision would have been interpreted narrowly. Nonetheless, the revised section brings national law into alignment with the exception as framed under Article 4(2).

Prior to its enactment, the Supreme Court found that the religious ethos exemption was compatible with the Irish Constitution in Re Article 26 and the Employment Equality Bill 1996 [1997] 2 IR 321.

4.3 Armed forces and other specific occupations (Article 3(4) and Recitals 18 and 19, Directive 2000/78)

In Ireland, national legislation provides for an exception for the armed forces in relation to age or disability discrimination (Article 3(4), Directive 2000/78).

Section 37(5) EEA provides that the prohibition of discrimination on the age and disability grounds does not apply in relation to employment in the Defence Forces.³⁵⁰ In Ireland, the scope of the exception is not limited to safeguarding the combat effectiveness of the armed forces. In Ireland, the scope of the exception extends to other non-combat staff, such as civilians employed in administrative positions in the army.³⁵¹

In relation to other specific occupations, under Section 37(3) EEA, it is an occupational requirement that those employed in the police, prison service or any emergency service are fully competent, available and capable of undertaking the range of functions associated with such positions so that the operational capacity of the services concerned may be preserved. Although not directed at employees with disabilities, 'the clear implication on reading the section is that it is'.³⁵² This provision reflects the wording of Recital 18 Directive 2000/78 and was considered by the Labour Court in a 2018 case concerning a prison officer.³⁵³ The court found that subsection (3) exempted the listed occupations from the duty to provide reasonable accommodation under Section 16 EEA. However, the High Court overturned that finding on appeal.³⁵⁴ As discussed further in Chapter 12.2, the Court held that the occupational requirement does not relieve an employer of its obligation to consider whether an employee could be retained with the provision of reasonable accommodation.

4.4 Nationality discrimination (Article 3(2))

a) Discrimination on the ground of nationality

In Ireland, national law includes exceptions relating to difference of treatment based on nationality.

Under Section 6(2)(h) EEA and Section 3(2)(h) ESA, the race ground includes 'nationality' and 'ethnic or national origins'.

Section 12(7) EEA allows for different treatment on the basis of nationality in relation to admission or attendance fees and in relation to the allocation of places at any vocational or training course between nationals of other countries and citizens of Ireland, Swiss and EEA nationals, or nationals of another Member State of the European Union. This exception would appear to comply with the provisions of Racial Equality Directive 3(2).

³⁵⁰ According to the High Court, the exemption covers access to employment and conditions of employment. The provision, therefore, exempts use of an age restriction in respect of persons seeking to join the Defence Forces: Smyth v Minister for Justice, Equality and Defence & ors. [2013] IEHC 110, 1 February 2013, https://www.courts.ie/view/judgments/14bdec9a-c0b6-46c5-9347-96173411d521/b8b069d7-0e28-4a47-b34c-08176b7f4881/2013_IEHC_110_1.pdf/pdf.

³⁵¹ There is no case law on this exemption. The text of Section 37(5) refers to 'employment in the Defence Forces' and does not differentiate between categories of staff. A civilian employed by a representative body for members of the Defence Forces referred a successful age discrimination complaint in 2017. Although the respondent body was established under the law that regulates the Defence Forces, it appears to have been treated as a distinct entity and not considered part of the Defence Forces by the WRC. There is no reference to Section 37(5) in the decision: Devereux v Permanent Defence Force Other Ranks Representative Association, ADJ-00007926, 17 November 2017, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2017/November/%20ADJ-00007926.html>.

Section 17(2) EEA provides that, in relation to discrimination on the basis of nationality, nothing in the Act shall render unlawful any action taken in accordance with the Employment Permits Acts 2003-2006.³⁵⁵

Section 7(5)(b) ESA permits the Minister for Education and Science to differentiate between Irish and EU nationals, Swiss and EEA nationals on the one hand and nationals of other countries on the other in relation to the provision of educational grants.

Section 14(1)(aa) ESA provides that distinctions based on nationality are allowed in relation to enforcement of the Immigration Act 2004 or in respect of other residency requirements.³⁵⁶ This exception falls within the provisions contained in the Racial Equality Directive.

Section 6(7) ESA permits differential treatment of persons on the basis of nationality in relation to housing or accommodation provided by or on behalf of the relevant minister.

Section 5(2)(f) ESA permits a difference in treatment of persons on the basis of nationality in relation to the provision or organisation of a sporting facility or event, to the extent that the differences are reasonably necessary having regard to the nature of the facility or event and are relevant to the purpose of the facility or event.

A club will not be a discriminating club if it excludes membership by reason that its principal purpose is to cater for the needs of a particular nationality under Section 9 ESA.

In Ireland, nationality (as in citizenship) is explicitly mentioned as a protected ground in national anti-discrimination law.³⁵⁷

Under Section 6(2)(h) EEA and Section 3(2)(h) ESA, the race ground includes 'nationality' and 'ethnic or national origins'.

b) Relationship between nationality and 'racial or ethnic origin'

There is no definition of nationality, nor any case law which would shed light on any overlap with ethnicity or on whether or not statelessness is covered.

4.5 Health and safety (Article 7(2) Directive 2000/78)

In Ireland, there are exceptions in relation to disability and health and safety, as allowed under Article 7(2) of the Employment Equality Directive.

Under Section 33 EEA, it is permissible to adopt positive action measures aimed at protecting the health and safety at work of persons with a disability, or at safeguarding or promoting the integration of such persons into the working environment.

There are no specific exemptions in relation to any of the other protected grounds, but issues such as dress codes are currently dictated by the policy of the individual employer. For example, employers who operate manufacturing processes that require a clean-room environment generally impose very strict regulations in respect of attire. Case law suggests that adjudicators will scrutinise dress codes for discriminatory impacts. In one case, a male retail worker was dismissed for not wearing a face mask after he refused to shave off his beard. The Labour Court found that the requirement to wear a face mask or remove facial hair was not motivated by considerations of hygiene or food safety. The dress code operated in a way that restricted the complainant's freedom to determine his own appearance to a significantly greater degree than it did in the case of women. As a consequence, the dismissal was discriminatory on the gender ground.³⁵⁸

4.6 Exceptions related to discrimination on the ground of age (Article 6 Directive 2000/78)

4.6.1 Direct discrimination

a) Exceptions to the prohibition of direct discrimination on grounds of age

In Ireland, national law provides for specific exceptions for direct discrimination on the ground of age.

Section 34(4) EEA permits an employer to set retirement ages (voluntary or compulsory) for employees or categories of employees. Section 6(3)(c) EEA permits employers to offer fixed-term contracts to persons over the compulsory retirement age for that employment. Both these provisions are subject to the objective justification requirement described immediately below.

A maximum age for recruitment may be set if an employer can show that there will not be a reasonable return on the investment needed to train a new recruit to the necessary standard prior to retirement age (Section 34(5) EEA).

b) Justification of direct discrimination on the ground of age

In Ireland, it is possible, in specified circumstances, to justify direct discrimination on the ground of age.

The Equality (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 2015 amended the statutory provisions on retirement ages and fixed-term contracts to explicitly provide that such measures must be objectively justified. In essence, the 2015 Act codified principles set out in case law, which had sought to align domestic law with the requirements of Directive 2000/78.³⁵⁹ The test is now compliant with EU law.

c) Permitted differences of treatment based on age

In Ireland, national law permits differences of treatment based on age for any activities within the material scope of Directive 2000/78/EC.

Section 34(5) EEA permits employers to set a maximum age for recruitment which takes account of the cost or period of time involved in training a recruit to a standard at which the recruit will be effective in the job concerned and of the need for a reasonable period of time prior to retirement age during which the recruit will be effective in that job. It is availed of by the armed forces and by the police service (see further Chapter 4.6.3). Under ³⁵⁸ Labour Court, Dunnes Stores v O'Byrne, EED0314, 28 October 2003, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2003/October/EED0314.html>.

³⁵⁹ In Donnellan v The Minister for Justice, Equality and Law Reform [2008] IEHC 467, 25 July 2008, <http://www.bailii.org/ie/cases/IEHC/2008/H467.html>, the High Court noted that 'national measures relating to retirement ages are not excluded from consideration under Directive 2000/78/EC. Any discrimination with regards to age must, as put by that Directive, serve a legitimate aim or purpose, and the means taken to achieve that purpose be appropriate and should go no further than is necessary' [Para. 126]. Donnellan was routinely cited by adjudicators prior to the changes effected by the 2015 Act in requiring objective justification of retirement ages. See further: Equality Tribunal, O'Mahony v Southwest Doctors On Call Ltd., DEC-E2014-031, 14 May 2014, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2014/May/DEC-E2014-031.html>.

Section 12(7) EEA, third-level educational institutions may treat people differently on the basis of age in allocating places on vocational training courses to mature students.

d) Fixing of ages for admission to occupational pension schemes

In Ireland, national law allows occupational pension schemes to fix ages for admission to the scheme, taking up the opportunity provided by Article 6(2).

Section 72(1) of the Pensions Acts 1990-2018, provides:

'It shall not constitute a breach of the principle of equal pension treatment on the age ground for a scheme to—

(a) fix age or qualifying service, or a combination of both, as a condition or criterion for admission to the scheme,

(b) fix different ages or qualifying service, or a combination of both, as conditions or criteria for admission to the scheme for employees or groups or categories of employees,

(c) fix age or qualifying service, or a combination of both, as a condition or criterion for entitlement to benefits under the scheme,

(d) fix different ages or qualifying service, or a combination of both, as conditions or criteria for entitlement to benefits under the scheme for employees or groups or categories of employees,

(e) (i) fix age or qualifying service, or a combination of both, as a condition or criterion in relation to the accrual of rights under a defined benefit scheme or in relation to the level of contributions to a defined contribution scheme, or

(ii) fix different ages or qualifying service, or a combination of both, as conditions or criteria in relation to the accrual of rights under a defined benefit scheme or in relation to the level of contributions to a defined contribution scheme for employees or groups or categories of employees, where, in the context of the relevant employment, to do so is appropriate and necessary by reference to a legitimate objective of the employer, including legitimate employment policy, labour market and vocational training objectives,

(f) use criteria as to age in actuarial calculations:

Provided that this does not result in a breach of the principle of equal pension treatment on the gender ground.³⁶⁰

Section 34(3) EEA provides that it does not amount to discrimination on the age ground for an employer to fix ages for admission to an occupational benefits scheme or for entitlement to benefits under it; to fix different ages for all employees or a category of employees; to use, in the context of such a scheme, age criteria in actuarial calculations; or to provide different rates for severance payment for different employees, these rates being based on or taking into account the period between the age of an employee on leaving employment and his or her compulsory retirement age – provided that none of these measures constitute discrimination on the gender ground. Occupational benefit schemes are defined as schemes which provide benefits to employees or categories of employees on their becoming 'ill, incapacitated or redundant but does not include any occupational pension scheme providing for pensions, gratuities or other allowances payable on retirement or death.'³⁶¹

³⁶⁰ Applied, for example, in Equality Tribunal, Charlton v Bus Éireann, DEC-P2011-004, 16 November 2011, <http://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2011/November/DEC-P2011-004-Full-Case-Report.html>; Kelly v Iarnród Éireann, DEC-P2013-001, 11 November 2013, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie:443/en/Cases/2013/November/DEC-P2013-001.html>; Grey v Local Government Computer Services Board, DEC-P2010-004, 26 August 2010, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie:443/en/Cases/2010/August/DEC-P2010-004-Full-Case-Report.html>.

³⁶¹ Section 34(3A) EEA.

4.6.2 Special conditions for younger or older workers

In Ireland, there are special conditions set by law for younger workers in order to promote their vocational integration.

The Protection of Young Persons (Employment) Act 1996³⁶² limits the employment of young persons (i.e. persons who are over 16 but not yet 18). In general, the Act prohibits the employment of children, that is, persons under 16 years of age (Section 3). However, children over the age of 14 may be employed to undertake light work in the following circumstances: during the school holidays, provided there is a minimum three-week break from work during the summer; part-time during the school term (for those over 15 years old only, and for a maximum of eight hours in the week); or as part of an approved work experience or education programme where the work is not harmful to their safety, health or development (Section 3). Where licensed by the Minister for Business, Enterprise and Innovation, children may also be employed in cultural, artistic, sports or advertising work as long as it does not interfere with their attendance at school, vocational guidance or training programmes or their capacity to benefit from the instruction received. Employers that hire children or young persons must comply with several requirements, including maintaining a register of such workers, which should set out the hours worked, the rate of pay and the total amount of wages paid. Before employing a child, the employer must obtain written permission from their parent or guardian (Section 5).

4.6.3 Minimum and maximum age requirements

In Ireland, there are exceptions permitting minimum and maximum age requirements in relation to access to employment and training.

As noted in the previous section, the Protection of Young Persons (Employment) Act 1996 in effect prohibits the employment of children aged under 14, while imposing various restrictions and conditions on the employment of children (aged 14-15) and young persons (aged 16-18).

Under Section 6(3)(b) EEA, an employer may set a minimum recruitment age not exceeding 18 years.

Section 34(5) EEA provides that it does not constitute discrimination on the age ground to set, in relation to any job, a maximum age for recruitment which takes account of –

- '(a) any cost or period of time involved in training a recruit to a standard at which the recruit will be effective in that job, and
- (b) the need for there to be a reasonable period of time prior to retirement age during which the recruit will be effective in that job.'

In practice, it seems the exception is primarily used to set maximum age requirements for recruitment to posts in the police³⁶³ and armed forces.³⁶⁴ Age limits include the following:

- Army and Air Corps under 25 at time of enlistment;
- Naval Service under 27 at time of enlistment;
- Air Corps apprenticeship under 19 at time of apprenticeship;
- Police under 35 to commence training.

³⁶⁴ Age limits for recruitment to the Defence Forces are also covered by Section 37(5) EEA.

This exception was considered for the first time in two 2020 WRC decisions, which were issued following protracted legal proceedings (see case summary in Chapter 12.2).³⁶⁵ The complainants sought to join the Garda Síochána (police force) in 2005 and 2007. Their applications were not considered because secondary legislation set 35 as the upper age limit for entry as a trainee. The WRC upheld the complaints. The respondent did not supply evidence of the costs associated with the training programme in place at the relevant time. For that reason, the WRC found that the Garda Commissioner could not avail of the exception provided for under Section 34(5). Both complainants were awarded the maximum compensation. In reply to a parliamentary question, the Minister for Justice announced that an expert review group had been established to examine the recruitment age, amongst other matters, and that it would report to the Garda Commissioner in 2021.³⁶⁶

4.6.4 Retirement

a) State pension age

In Ireland, there is no state pension age at which individuals must begin to collect their state pensions.

If the person wishes to work beyond the state pension age, the pension can be deferred. An individual can collect a pension and still work.

The State Pension (Contributory) is paid to people from the age of 66 who may have adequate social insurance contributions. It is not means-tested, and it is possible for people to derive income from other sources while in receipt of the pension. The pension is subject to tax. Persons aged 66 and over who do not qualify for the contributory pension are entitled to the means-tested State Pension (Non-Contributory), which is also subject to tax.³⁶⁷ The state pension age applies equally to men and women.

The qualifying age for both forms of pension was to be raised to 67 in 2021 and to 68 in 2028.³⁶⁸ However, that legislative provision was repealed in 2020.³⁶⁹ The planned increase in the pension age was thereby delayed pending a review of state pensions policy, which will be informed by the findings of the Commission on Pensions. The Commission on Pensions was established by the Government in 2020. It is charged with examining, inter alia, qualifying age, contribution rates and eligibility for state pensions.³⁷⁰ The Commission is due to report in 2021.

b) Occupational pension schemes

In Ireland, there is no standard age when people can begin to receive payments from occupational pension schemes and other employer-funded pension arrangements.

This is subject to the individual contract, and deferral of pension is also subject to the terms of the employment contract.

c) State imposed mandatory retirement ages

In Ireland, there is no state-imposed mandatory retirement age(s) in private employment. There is a statutory retirement age for some public servants, which is dependent on the date of recruitment. For people who joined the public service before 1 April 2004, the retirement age was raised from 65 to 70 in December 2018.³⁷¹ Those who took up posts since 1 January 2013 must also retire at 70.³⁷² Public servants recruited between April 2004 and December 2012 have no compulsory retirement age. Distinct compulsory retirement ages are set for members of An Garda Síochána (the police), the Defence Force, firefighters and prison officers.³⁷³ Several challenges to regulations establishing the compulsory retirement age for Gardaí serving at the ranks of chief superintendent³⁷⁴ and superintendent³⁷⁵ were determined in 2020. In each instance the complaints failed. Imposing mandatory retirement ages was an appropriate and necessary means of achieving the aims of succession planning and ensuring motivation and dynamism within the police force. The measures were proportionate because the Garda Commissioner could extend an individual's employment, and the complainants were entitled to a full pension on attaining 30 years' service (see case summary in Chapter 12.2).

d) Retirement ages imposed by employers

In Ireland, national law permits employers to set retirement ages (or ages at which the termination of an employment contract is possible) by contract or collective bargaining or unilaterally.

Section 34(4) EEA permits employers to fix different ages for the retirement of employees, whether their retirement is voluntary or compulsory, within the terms of the contract of employment, provided that (a) it is objectively and reasonably justified by a legitimate aim, and (b) the means of achieving that aim are appropriate and necessary.³⁷⁶

The objective justification requirement was expressly provided for under the Equality (Miscellaneous) Provisions Act 2015.³⁷⁷ Prior to its enactment, case law was inconsistent on the application of the requirement. This was in part attributable to a High Court judgment, which found that the Equality Tribunal (now the WRC) could not issue a ruling that sought to align domestic law with EU law where to do so would contravene the express terms of a national legal provision.³⁷⁸ Pursuant to a 2018 CJEU judgment, the WRC now has the authority to disapply national law where it conflicts with EU law.³⁷⁹

A Code of Practice on Longer Working was adopted in December 2017.³⁸⁰ Reflecting the explicit requirement set out under Section 34(4) EEA, as well as decisions of the Equality Tribunal that pre-date the legislative change, the Code advises employers that any mandatory retirement age must be capable of objective justification both by the existence of a legitimate aim and by evidence that the means of achieving that aim is appropriate and necessary.³⁸¹ It sets out the following examples of what may constitute a legitimate aim:

- intergenerational fairness (allowing younger workers to progress);³⁸²
- motivation and dynamism through the increased prospect of promotion;
- health and safety (generally in more safety-critical occupations);³⁸³
- creation of a balanced age structure in the workforce;³⁸⁴
- personal and professional dignity (avoiding capability issues with older employees);
- succession planning.

Case law has established that reducing financial costs is not in and of itself a legitimate aim.³⁸⁵ In a 2020 decision, the WRC underlined that an employer must supply evidence which demonstrates that a compulsory retirement is appropriate and necessary. In that case, the respondent cited several of the legitimate aims set out in the Code but omitted to substantiate how the complainant's retirement was a proportionate means of achieving any of those aims.³⁸⁶ The complainant was awarded EUR 25 000 in compensation.

pensionable age or any other age. To be covered by the Unfair Dismissals Acts 1977-2015,³⁸⁷ employees must not have reached the normal retirement age for 'employees of the same employer in similar employment.'³⁸⁸ It is, however, possible for an employee to contest their dismissal in the form of compulsory retirement under the legislation by, for example, establishing that the employer did not have a normal retirement age in place or that it was inconsistently applied.³⁸⁹ Employees contesting age-based discrimination (or discrimination on any other ground) may avail of their rights under EEA, which are not subject to an upper age limit.

Section 6(3)(a) EEA prohibits discrimination on the grounds of age for persons above 16.

f) Compliance of national law with CJEU case law

In Ireland, national legislation is in line with the CJEU case law on age regarding mandatory retirement.

Section 34(4) EEA was amended in 2015 to provide that, while employers may set different retirement ages for employees, such a provision must be objectively and reasonably justified by a legitimate aim, and the means of achieving that aim must be appropriate and necessary.

4.6.5 Redundancy

a) Age and seniority taken into account for redundancy selection

In Ireland, national law does not permit age or seniority to be taken into account in selecting workers for redundancy.

Section 8(6)(c) EEA provides that employers will discriminate on any of the nine grounds, including age, if they do not afford employees the same treatment in relation to redundancies.³⁹⁰

b) Age taken into account for redundancy compensation

In Ireland, national law provides compensation for redundancy. Such compensation may be affected by the age of the worker.

The Redundancy Payments Acts 1967-2014 provide for a minimum entitlement to a redundancy payment for employees who have a set period of service with the employer.³⁹¹ In order to qualify for a payment, employees must be aged over 16 and have worked

Under the Equality Act 2004, the automatic exclusion of employees over the statutory retirement age under the redundancy payments legislation (i.e. 66 years or over) from being able to bring an unfair dismissal claim was removed.

³⁸⁹ See, for example, Labour Court, Longford County Council v Neilon, UDD1950, 2 September 2019, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2019/september/udd1950.html>. An unfair dismissal complaint was upheld since the employer could not establish that a normal retirement age existed within the organisation.

³⁹⁰ Applied, for example, in Equality Tribunal, O'Farrell v Mercury Engineering, DEC-E2012-096, 24 July 2012, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2012/July/DEC-E2012-096-Full-Case-Report.html>. Selection for redundancy on the basis of age may also constitute unfair dismissal under Section 6(3) of the Unfair Dismissals Acts 1977-2015.

³⁹¹ Redundancy Payment Act 1967, 18 December 1967, <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/eli/1967/act/21/enacted/en/html>. A revised text is available at: https://www.lawreform.ie/fileupload/RevisedActs/WithAnnotations/HTML/EN_ACT_1967_0021.htm.

continuously for the employer for at least 104 weeks while over the age of 16. There is no upper age limit.

Employers may agree a redundancy payment above the statutory minimum, and in such circumstances, compensation may be affected by the age of the worker. Section 34(3)(d) EEA provides: 'In an occupational benefits scheme it shall not constitute discrimination on the age ground for an employer ... to provide different rates of severance payment for different employees or groups or categories of employees, being rates based on or taking into account the period between the age of an employee on leaving the employment and his or her compulsory retirement age, provided that that does not constitute discrimination on the gender ground.' Occupational benefits schemes include benefits payable on redundancy.

The Labour Court interpreted the exception in a 2013 case.³⁹² The complainants had been employed for periods ranging from 16 to 25 years and were offered redundancy terms that provided for a payment of five weeks' pay per year of service, in addition to statutory redundancy payments. However, employees who were close to retirement age would receive either the terms of the agreed package or the amount of salary that they would have earned had they remained in employment until the normal retirement age of 65, whichever was the lesser. Each complainant would receive less than the amount paid to younger workers. According to the Court, Directive 2000/78 provided that Member States, as opposed to individual employers, could provide for differences in treatment on grounds of age where those differences could be objectively justified by a legitimate aim. The Court found that the Oireachtas had made express provision for differences in treatment based on age in respect of severance payments through Section 34(3)(d). It stated that 'the underlying rationale for this provision is that workers close to retirement are in a substantially different position than those who have longer periods in which they could have expected to remain in the active labour force and that, as a matter of social and labour market policy, this difference can be legitimately reflected in constructing redundancy packages ... Against this backdrop, it appears that the Oireachtas considered it reasonable and objectively justifiable, within the meaning of Article 6(1) of the Directive, to provide for the differences in treatment allowed for by s.34(3)(d) of the Act.' The Labour Court found that the method of calculating the redundancy packages was permitted under EEA. Its decision was distinguished in a 2017 case that upheld a complaint of indirect discrimination on the ground of age with respect to redundancy compensation.³⁹³ The impugned provision (a cap limiting payment to 1.25 times an employee's salary) was not saved by Section 34(3)(d), since it was not directly linked to proximity to retirement. Application of the cap resulted in the two complainants receiving proportionately less compensation per year of service compared with younger workers (years of service being inextricably linked with age). The WRC found that the established disadvantage was not objectively justified. While the respondent's aim was legitimate – ensuring an equitable distribution amongst the respondent's workforce – it did not provide any evidence at the time of applying the provision that it had considered whether there were other less discriminatory ways of achieving the aim.

4.7 Public security, public order, criminal offences, protection of health, protection of the rights and freedoms of others (Article 2(5), Directive 2000/78)

In Ireland, national law includes exceptions that seek to rely on Article 2(5) of the Employment Equality Directive.

Sections 16(5) and (6) EEA state that an employer is not required to recruit, retain or promote a person if they are aware, on the basis of a criminal conviction or other reliable information, that the individual engages or has a propensity to engage in any form of unlawful sexual activity, particularly where the employment involves access to minors or other vulnerable persons.

4.8 Any other exceptions

In Ireland, other exceptions to the prohibition of discrimination (on any ground covered by this report) provided in national law are the following:

Under Section 36(1-2) EEA, it is permissible to impose requirements in relation to residence, citizenship and proficiency in the Irish language for the following public service jobs: office holders in the service of the state, including the police service (Garda Síochána), Defence Forces, civil servants, officers of local authorities, harbour authorities, health boards and vocational education committees. While such requirements are permitted, not all of these positions impose such restrictions. The police service has removed the requirement for proficiency in the Irish language, requiring only proficiency in two languages at least one of which is Irish or English, and employment is open to EU and EEA nationals, Swiss nationals, refugees under the Refugee Act 1996,³⁹⁴ or to persons with one year's continuous legal residence in the state and a total legal residence amounting to four years in the preceding eight years (the asylum process does not count towards the qualifying five-year period).³⁹⁵ It is also permissible under the Act to require Irish-language proficiency from teachers in both primary and post-primary schools.³⁹⁶ Finally, Section 36 permits the imposition of certain educational requirements for certain posts,³⁹⁷ professions, occupations or vocations.³⁹⁸

Under Section 35(1) EEA it is not discriminatory to pay a disabled person a lesser rate of remuneration if their output is less than that of a non-disabled person. It provides:

'Nothing in this Part or Part II shall make it unlawful for an employer to provide, for an employee with a disability, a particular rate of remuneration for work of a particular description if, by reason of the disability, the amount of that work done by the employee during a particular period is less than the amount of similar work done, or which could reasonably be expected to be done, during that period by an employee without the disability.'

The rate of pay cannot fall below the statutory minimum wage.³⁹⁹ To date, there is no case law illustrating how the exception might apply in practice. In a parliamentary debate on the provision, the Minister maintained that its purpose was to encourage employers to hire more disabled people.⁴⁰⁰ The provision seems to contravene the framework directive, which does not provide for any such exemption.

ESA's principal and most problematic exception is contained in Section 14(1)(a)(i), which provides that nothing in the Act can be construed as prohibiting the taking of any action required by any enactment or order of a court, any measure adopted by the European Union or any international convention.⁴⁰¹

ESA contains a number of exceptions to the prohibition of discrimination in the supply of goods and services, including the following:

- Differences in treatment are permitted in relation to 'annuities, pensions, insurance policies' or other matters related to the assessment of risk. The difference in treatment should relate to actuarial or statistical data or other relevant underwriting or commercial factor and should be reasonable.⁴⁰²
- Difference in the treatment of persons on the religion ground in relation to goods or services provided for a religious purpose.⁴⁰³
- Difference in treatment of persons on the gender, age or disability ground or on the basis of nationality or national origin in the organisation of sporting events.⁴⁰⁴
- Having an age requirement for persons to be either an adoptive or foster parent.⁴⁰⁵
- Differences in the treatment of persons in respect of the disposal of goods, or the provision of a service, which can reasonably be regarded as goods or a service suitable only to the needs of certain persons.⁴⁰⁶

Section 46 ESA provides that the provisions of the Act apply in respect of ships and aircraft registered in the state, but that actions done in respect of such a ship or aircraft while subject to the jurisdiction of a country outside of the state and that are required by the law of that state shall not constitute discrimination.

Section 7(3)(e) ESA provides that it will not amount to age discrimination to allocate places at third-level institutions for mature students (i.e. those over 23).

Section 16 ESA permits the imposition or maintenance of preferential fee charges in respect of goods or services being offered for persons with children, married couples, persons in a specific age group or persons with a disability. The section also permits different treatment where a person is treated differently solely in the exercise of a clinical judgment in connection with the diagnosis of illness or his or her medical treatment or is incapable of entering into an enforceable contract or of giving an informed consent and for that reason the treatment is reasonable in the particular case.⁴⁰⁷

Section 15(1) ESA stipulates that a person who provides goods or services is not required to deal with a customer in circumstances which would lead a reasonable individual having the responsibility, knowledge and experience of the person to the belief, on grounds other than discriminatory grounds, that to deal with the customer would produce a substantial risk of criminal or disorderly conduct or behaviour or damage to property at or in the vicinity of the place in which the goods or services or the premises or accommodation are located.⁴⁰⁸

The respondents sought to invoke the exception to justify the exclusion of parents with infants from a restaurant and pub respectively. On the facts, the Tribunal found that the services in question could not be considered as suitable only for the needs of people without children.

5 POSITIVE ACTION (Article 5 Directive 2000/43, Article 7 Directive 2000/78)

a) Scope for positive action measures

In Ireland, positive action is permitted in national law in respect of age, civil status, disability, family status, gender, race, religion, sexual orientation and membership of the Traveller community.

Section 33 EEA provides that nothing in the Act 'shall render unlawful measures that are maintained or adopted with a view to ensuring full equality in practice between employees'.⁴¹² It then provides that such measures are ones that 'prevent or compensate for disadvantages linked to any of the discriminatory grounds'; 'protect the health or safety at work of persons with a disability' or 'create or maintain facilities for safeguarding or promoting the integration of such persons into the working environment'. There is no explicit requirement of necessity or of proportionality.

Section 35 EEA provides for 'special provisions related to persons with disabilities'. It stipulates, in Section 35(2), that nothing in EEA shall make it unlawful:

- 'For an employer or any other person to provide, for a person with a disability, special treatment or facilities where the provision of that treatment or those facilities—
- (a) enables or assists that person to undertake vocational training, to take part in a selection process or to work, or
 - (b) provides that person with a training or working environment suited to the disability, or
 - (c) otherwise assists that person in relation to vocational training or work.'

In accordance with Section 35(3), a person without a disability or with a different disability 'shall not be entitled' to such special treatment or facilities.

The provisions were considered for the first time in Lydon v Navan Education Centre.⁴¹³ The complainant asserted that he had been subject to less favourable treatment on the disability ground in the course of an appointments process. Certain staff employed by the respondent on a secondment basis were advised that they would have to reapply for their jobs and that there would be a reduced number of posts available. One of the three candidates for two available posts became seriously ill immediately prior to the scheduled interviews. Having interviewed the complainant and another candidate, the respondent delayed the recruitment process to enable the ill colleague to attend an interview. When there was no indication of when she would recover, the respondent deemed the ill colleague to be appointed. It informed the complainant that he had ranked second at interview and that the first-ranked candidate would be appointed to the remaining post.

The respondent argued that its decision to appoint the ill colleague without an interview amounted to positive action as provided for under Section 33. The adjudication officer found that the respondent's actions did not fall within the ambit of that section, since it was not aimed at ensuring 'full equality in practice'. Full equality might have been achieved by, for example, adopting an alternative means of assessing all of the candidates without recourse to interviews. He found rather that the employer's actions were saved by Section 35(2). Notwithstanding the fact that the comparator was not assessed in any way, 'Section 35 appears to give an employer wide latitude in giving a disabled employee special treatment or facilities; it states "nothing in this Part ... shall make it unlawful etc." The language of the provision covers special treatment and facilities and does not exclude the actions taken by the respondent in this case. The actions taken by the respondent enabled the comparator to work. While this disadvantaged the complainant, it was permissible ⁴¹² Positive action on the gender ground is provided for separately under Section 24 EEA.

⁴¹³ Workplace Relations Commission, DEC-E2018-003, 26 January 2018, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2018/January/DEC-E2018-003%20.html>.

special treatment within the scope of the Employment Equality Act' (Para. 4.12). On appeal, the Labour Court did not consider the ambit of the positive action provisions, since it held that the disability ground operates asymmetrically. As a person without a disability, the complainant did not have locus standi to bring a disability-ground complaint under EEA.⁴¹⁴

Several ESA provisions permit positive action. Section 14(1)(b) ESA provides that nothing in the Act shall prohibit preferential treatment or the taking of positive measures that are bona fide intended to:

- (i) promote equality of opportunity for persons who are, in relation to other persons, disadvantaged or likely to be unable to avail themselves of the same opportunities as those other persons; or
- (ii) to cater for the special needs of persons, or category of persons, who, because of their circumstances, may require facilities, arrangements, services or assistance not required by persons who do not have those special needs.

In a 2018 case, a parent argued that a school transport scheme was discriminatory on the ground of religion.⁴¹⁵ While children who wished to attend a minority religious ethos school were entitled to access the scheme without restriction, children seeking to attend a Catholic ethos school were subject to eligibility criteria based on the distance between their place of residence and the nearest education centre. The WRC assessed whether this acknowledged preferential treatment fell within the parameters of Section 14(1)(b)(i), as contended by the respondent. It noted that the applicable test was not whether the treatment was 'reasonable or appropriate or excessively favourable'; rather, it had to be established that there was a bona fide intention to promote equality of opportunity for persons who were disadvantaged or less likely to be able to avail of the opportunity to attend education through the ethos of minority religions compared with persons not in that category. According to the adjudication officer, the respondent provided 'compelling evidence' to that effect. It argued that the measure was necessary to maintain adequate numbers of pupils in minority ethos schools, which would otherwise be at risk of becoming unviable. There were, for instance, only 23 schools in the state providing post-primary education through the Church of Ireland ethos, compared with 343 Catholic ethos schools. In light of such evidence, the WRC was satisfied that the preferential treatment was based on a bona fide intention to promote equality of opportunity for disadvantaged persons within the meaning of Section 14(1)(b)(i).

Section 14(1)(b)(ii) was applied to rebut a prima facie case of discrimination in a 2019 case.⁴¹⁶ A man referred a complaint of gender-ground discrimination because he was not permitted to use the female-only area at a fitness club. The respondent argued that it reserved a space for the exclusive use of females for two reasons. Firstly, it enabled Muslim female members to exercise without wearing their headscarves. Secondly, it allayed health and safety concerns in respect of older women, who had experienced difficulty in using the main gym because many items of equipment had been left by males after use with extremely heavy weights attached. Citing section 14(1)(b), the adjudication officer was satisfied that the respondent provided objective reasons justifying its decision to provide a female-only area, 'based on the very specific needs of a category of persons who would not otherwise be able to participate.'

In a 2020 decision, the WRC found that Section 14(1)(b) justified the prioritisation of people aged between 18 and 35 for admission to an accredited horticulture education programme.⁴¹⁷ As a labour market activation measure, the course was aimed at unemployed people and disadvantaged persons who did not hold educational qualifications. The respondent was, therefore, entitled to reject the 70-year-old complainant's application in circumstances where all places on the programme had been filled by people within or close to the priority age group.

Section 5(2)(h) allows differences in treatment in relation to services that are provided for the principal purpose of promoting the special interests of people in a 'category of persons'. Any difference in treatment of people in that category must be reasonably necessary to promote their special interests and must be undertaken in a bona fide manner. The term 'category' is not defined, but it seems to be used throughout ESA to denote a sub-group of people falling under one of the discriminatory grounds, for example persons with a particular disability or of a specific nationality or age. The Equality Tribunal has noted that the meaning of Section 5(2)(h) is ambiguous, and commented: 'On the basis that the treatment must flow from the promotion of the special interests of persons in the category ... this sub-section of the Equal Status Act, 2000 will normally, if not always, relate to the justification of more favourable treatment of a particular category of persons'.⁴¹⁸ In Keane v World Travel Centre,⁴¹⁹ a company that offered reduced fares on flights only to Filipino nationals could not justify its policy under Section 5(2)(h). World Travel Centre maintained that it was engaging in 'positive discrimination'. The Equality Officer disagreed and found that it did not meet any of 'the strict and comprehensive criteria required by Section 5(2)(h)' (at Para. 5.5). The sole purpose of the special offer was to gain a commercial advantage over competitors and not to advance the special interests of the Filipino community.

Section 6(6) ESA permits different treatment by housing authorities and voluntary housing associations in the provision of accommodation on the basis of family size, family status, civil status, disability, age or membership of the Traveller community (race and ethnicity are not mentioned in this section). Section 16(1) ESA also permits preferential fee charges in respect of goods and services for persons with a disability or in specific age groups.

b) Quotas in employment for people with disabilities

In Ireland, national law provides for a quota for the employment of people with disabilities.

The attainment of a 3 % quota for the employment of people with disabilities in the civil and public service is a long-standing Government policy. Under Section 47(4) of the Disability Act 2005, public bodies are obliged to meet that target, 'unless there is good reason to the contrary for not doing so'.⁴²⁰ The National Disability Authority monitors the implementation of this process, but there are no sanctions for not achieving it. The target was met in 2011 and has been slightly exceeded since then.⁴²¹ The Government has undertaken to progressively increase the statutory target towards 6 % by 2024.⁴²²

6 REMEDIES AND ENFORCEMENT

6.1 Judicial and/or administrative procedures (Article 7 Directive 2000/43, Article 9 Directive 2000/78)

- a) Available procedures for enforcing the principle of equal treatment

In Ireland, the following procedures exist for enforcing the principle of equal treatment:

The Workplace Relations Commission (WRC) is the primary first instance forum for complaints under EEA, ESA and the Pensions Acts.⁴²³ It operates as a quasi-judicial body.⁴²⁴ The Director of the WRC assigns an adjudication officer to investigate complaints received. Complainants may represent themselves, costs may not be awarded against either party, and the procedure is informal. Provided both parties consent, complaints may be referred instead to the WRC's mediation service.⁴²⁵ Mediation is held in private and the agreement is not published.

The Labour Court may hear appeals in EEA and Pensions Acts cases, while ESA appeals are heard by the Circuit Court. Appeals entail a re-hearing of all matters of fact and law.⁴²⁶ The Labour Court is a quasi-judicial statutory tribunal, which, following the enactment of the Workplace Relations Act 2015, became the only appellate tribunal in employment rights disputes. The Circuit Court is a court of local and limited jurisdiction.

Following a CJEU ruling issued in December 2018, the WRC and the Labour Court now have jurisdiction to interpret and apply EU law principles that conflict with domestic law.⁴²⁷ The potential impact of this development is not yet apparent.

In relation to access to goods and services, the Intoxicating Liquor Act 2003 transferred jurisdiction for cases alleging discrimination 'on or at the point of entry to, licensed premises' to the District Court, a court of local and limited jurisdiction with jurisdiction over a range of criminal and civil matters.⁴²⁸

Determinations of the WRC and Labour Court, as well as mediated settlements, are legally binding.⁴²⁹ In the event of non-compliance, the complainant may bring enforcement proceedings.⁴³⁰ IHREC may provide assistance in the enforcement procedures.⁴³¹

The procedures apply to employment in the private and public sectors, subject to two exceptions. Members of the Defence Forces must address complaints about discrimination in employment to the authorities before accessing the WRC.⁴³² Complaints of discrimination

⁴²³ The WRC assumed the functions of the Equality Tribunal on 1 October 2015 under the terms of the Workplace Relations Act 2015: Ireland, Workplace Relations Act 2015, 20 May 2015, <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/eli/2015/act/16/enacted/en/print.html>.

⁴²⁴ The High Court dismissed a challenge to the constitutionality of the Workplace Relations Commission in a 2020 judgment (discussed in Chapter 12.2): Zalewski v Workplace Relations Commission [2020] IEHC 178, 21 April 2020, https://www.courts.ie/ga/acc/alfresco/adf2045f-1fd7-41a2-aa0b-31f0271504d8/2020_IEHC_178.pdf/pdf. As at the end of December 2020, an appeal was pending before the Supreme Court.

in recruitment by the holder of a public service recruitment licence, An Garda Síochána (the police service) or the Defence Forces must first be referred to the recruitment authority concerned.⁴³³

Discrimination claims are brought before the WRC by way of application using an online form.⁴³⁴ No fees are payable and hearings are conducted in private.⁴³⁵ The Director of the WRC is required to publish decisions under ESA and EEA 'on the internet in such form and in such manner' as they consider appropriate.⁴³⁶ Pursuant to that requirement, the decisions of both the WRC and Labour Court are available for public inspection, as they are published on the WRC website.⁴³⁷ In many instances the parties' identities are concealed in published decisions. This practice stems from the Director's discretion to publish decisions in such form and manner as they consider appropriate, which discretion is delegated to the individual adjudication officers who hear complaints.⁴³⁸ It is at the officer's discretion whether or to not anonymise one or both parties in a case, and it should be open to the parties to make representations on the matter to the WRC.⁴³⁹ Indeed, an ex tempore judgment of the High Court suggests that the WRC is obliged to elicit the views of the parties.⁴⁴⁰ The discretion to anonymise is generally exercised in sexual harassment complaints and many cases concerning the disability and sexual orientation grounds, unless the complainant requests otherwise.⁴⁴¹ Where the complainant is a child, the names of the parties to the case are also frequently recorded by the use of random initials. Anonymity has been applied in other sensitive cases, such as those involving criminal ⁴³⁸ IHREC issued an information note about this issue in April 2017 that led to the discontinuance of a routine practice of anonymising the names of parties to WRC equality law proceedings. The WRC issued a guide to its procedures in October 2015, which specified that all parties and witnesses would be anonymised: Workplace Relations Commission (2015), Procedures in the Investigation and Adjudication of Employment and Equality Complaints, http://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Publications_Forms/Procedures_Employment_and_Equality_Complaint_s.pdf. Following IHREC's intervention, a further note was published in August 2017, which states that 'parties will be named on the version uploaded to the website unless the Adjudication Officer decides there is a reason to anonymise the parties': WRC (2017), Guidance Note for a WRC Adjudication Hearing, http://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Publications_Forms/Guides_Booklets/Guidance_Note_for_a_WRC_Adjudication_Hearing.pdf.

⁴³⁹ The WRC did not accede to the respondent's request that names be redacted in Workplace Relations Commission, Hamill v Dublin City Council, ADJ-00011817, 31 October 2018, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2019/October/ADJ-00011817.html>. In a 2020 case, both parties requested anonymity but the WRC declined to grant it in the absence of 'compelling reasons such as sensitive material in the decision.' See Workplace Relations Commission, Singh Gill v Accenture Ireland Limited, ADJ-00023837, 9 April 2020, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2020/april/adj-00023837.html>. In at least two decisions issued in 2018, the complainants' names were anonymised, but not that of the respondent: Workplace Relations Commission, 3 Complainants, Mr. M, Ms. K and G (a minor) v Multiplex Cinemas Limited, DEC-S2018-012, 15 May 2018, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2018/May/DEC-S2018-012.html>; Workplace Relations Commission, Complainant v Kildare Sports and Leisure Facilities Limited, ADJ-00007882, 27 April 2018, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2018/April/ADJ-00007882.html>.

⁴⁴⁰ The text of the High Court judgment in question is not available: High Court, Sheehan v Director of Equality Tribunal, unreported, ex tempore, Kearns P., 11 June 2012. According to the authors of the main book on EEA, the Court 'granted a declaration that the Equality Tribunal is not entitled to unilaterally censor the names of parties and witnesses in a complaint under the Employment Equality Acts': Bolger, M., Bruton C. and Kimber, C. (2012), Employment Equality Law, Dublin, Thomson Reuters, p. 750. The High Court judgment is referred to in a few 2013 decisions of the Equality Tribunal; see, for example, Nayanarasami v Sheldon Park Hotel, DEC-E2013-199, 30 December 2013, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2013/December/DEC-E2013-199.html>.

⁴⁴¹ See, for example, Workplace Relations Commission, A Sales Representative v A Books Wholesaler, DEC-E2016-131, 20 September 2016, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2016/September/DEC-E2016-131.html>. The adjudication officer states, at Para. 1.1: 'It is the policy of the Equality Tribunal (now Workplace Relations Commission) to anonymise decisions in the case of disability unless specifically requested by the complainant otherwise.'

matters.⁴⁴² Outside of those situations, however, the precise rationale for concealing names is unclear, since it is often not set out in WRC decisions. IHREC is of the view that, where an adjudication officer has found that a respondent has engaged in discrimination, the principle of effectiveness will normally require that the decision of the adjudication officer be published in a manner that identifies the employer or service provider concerned.⁴⁴³ It remains to be seen whether EU law principles will affect decisions in future cases.

Both District Court and Circuit Court cases are heard in public; it is exceptionally rare for decisions of either court to be published.

Further avenues of redress for discrimination are provided for under other legislative provisions. For instance, complaints of dismissal due to discrimination may instead be brought under the Unfair Dismissals Acts 1977-2015. Under those Acts, the dismissal of an employee is deemed to be an unfair dismissal if it results wholly or mainly from the employee's age, race, colour or sexual orientation, religious or political opinions, or membership of the Travelling community.⁴⁴⁴ The WRC is also the first instance forum under that legislation.

Discrimination encountered in the course of accessing many public services can be directed to the Office of the Ombudsman,⁴⁴⁵ which oversees an administrative process that examines complaints about decisions, refusals to take action and procedures of public bodies.⁴⁴⁶ Bodies within the remit of the Ombudsman include Government departments and offices, local authorities, the Health Service Executive (HSE), voluntary hospitals and voluntary agencies that provide services on behalf of the HSE, and third-level colleges and universities. The Ombudsman can examine a complaint about an action taken by one of those bodies if someone has been adversely affected and the action was taken without proper authority, if the action was taken on irrelevant grounds, if it was the result of negligence or carelessness, if it was based on incorrect or incomplete information, if it was improperly discriminatory, if it was based on an undesirable administrative practice, or if it was otherwise contrary to fair or sound administration.⁴⁴⁷ The complaints process is conciliatory in nature and no fees are payable. Many complaints are resolved informally and do result in a written report; an investigation report is drawn up and published in respect of some complaints that are especially complex or have broad implications for public policy. Following an investigation, the Ombudsman may make a general recommendation to the body concerned. Recommendations issued are not legally binding, however. Where it appears to the Ombudsman that the response to a recommendation is not satisfactory, they may make a special report on the matter to the Oireachtas.⁴⁴⁸ Two such reports were issued on compliance with provisions of ESA.⁴⁴⁹

b) Barriers and other deterrents faced by litigants seeking redress

EEA, ESA and the Pensions Acts impose a restrictive six-month time limit for bringing complaints to the appropriate body.⁴⁵⁰ Additionally, ESA requires a complainant to initiate a complaint by notifying the respondent in writing, within two months of the date of the occurrence of the incident (or the date of the last occurrence if relevant), of the nature of the allegation and of their intention to seek redress under ESA.⁴⁵¹ The notification period may be extended for a further two months if the WRC is satisfied that reasonable cause prevented the complainant from sending the notification within the normal time period.⁴⁵² 'Exceptionally', the notification requirement may be disapplied.⁴⁵³

This presents difficulties for complainants, as evidenced by the fact that a substantial number of complaints are dismissed annually at hearing stage for failure to comply with the notification requirement.⁴⁵⁴ For instance, complaints of harassment on the gender and sexual orientation grounds were dismissed in two 2020 cases because the notices were served one day late.⁴⁵⁵ No data is available about complaints that were not pursued when prospective complainants became aware of the notification requirement.

Complaints of discrimination occurring 'on or at the point of entry to, licensed premises' must be brought to the District Court instead of the WRC. The major impact of this amendment is the cost implications for complainants as well as the complexity of the legal proceedings.⁴⁵⁶ Under the WRC system it is possible to represent oneself, and costs cannot be awarded against either complainant or respondent; this is not the case at the District Court. Moreover, the system generates confusion in practice; several complaints have been, and continue to be, lodged before the incorrect forum. Over the period from 2016 to 2019, the WRC dismissed 12 complaints since it did not have jurisdiction to hear the cases.⁴⁵⁷ Parts of two complaints could not be determined for the same reason in 2020.⁴⁵⁸

⁴⁵⁰ In two 2019 cases, the Labour Court underlined that the pursuit of an internal grievance does not stop the time limit running: Pfizer Pharmaceuticals Ireland Ltd. v Whelan, EDA1924, 12 July 2019, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2019/july/eda1924.html>; Beaumont Hospital v Kaunda, EDA1930, 3 September 2019, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2019/september/eda1930.html>.

⁴⁵² Section 21(3)(a)(i) ESA. See, for example, Workplace Relations Commission, Keenan v Topaz Energy Limited, ADJ-00011225, 20 July 2018, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2018/July/ADJ-00011225.html> (notification period extended to four months because delay was due to administrative error on part of solicitor).

⁴⁵³ Section 21(3) ESA. To the author's knowledge, this has only occurred on one occasion: Workplace Relations Commission, A Citizen v An Insurance Company, ADJ-00019822, 18 December 2019, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2019/december/adj-00019822.html>. ⁴⁵⁴ With respect to 2020, nine complaints were dismissed for failure to comply with the notification requirement. See, for example, the following decisions of the Workplace Relations Commission: Failure to notify respondent of intention to seek redress before the WRC: Vaughan v Tesco Ireland Ltd, ADJ-00021178, 5 February 2020, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2020/february/adj-00021178.html>; Customer 1 v A Gym, ADJ-00024885, 24 June 2020, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2020/june/adj-00024885.html>; Notification outside time period: Quintanilla v Nac Masters Swimming Club, ADJ-00024738, 28 January 2020, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2020/january/adj-00024738.html>.

Licensed premises include, most obviously, pubs, but also off-licences, hotels and many restaurants. Considerable uncertainty as to which premises, or parts of premises, are covered has emerged in Equality Tribunal and subsequently WRC decisions. A 2011 case exemplifies the difficulties faced by complainants.⁴⁵⁹ Two men argued that their gym membership was terminated when it was discovered that they were members of the Traveller community. During the Tribunal's investigation of the complaint, however, it emerged that the respondent publican's licence covered an extensive area including the gym. As a result, the gym was a licensed premise, and so the case could not proceed before the Tribunal. A 2018 decision established that the off-licence section of a supermarket falls under the jurisdiction of the District Court.⁴⁶⁰

In its 2016 report on Ireland, the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance (ECRI) considered that Ireland had only 'partially implemented' its recommendation on ensuring that 'there is an independent authority (other than the courts) competent to deal with cases of discrimination in the provision of goods and services'. It noted that, because of Section 19, 'a substantial number of pertinent cases' are excluded from the WRC's mandate. Significantly, it further observed 'that in particular members of the Traveller Community are often affected by discrimination in the provision of goods and services in licensed premises.'⁴⁶¹ ECRI's most recent report, issued in June 2019, reiterated these points.⁴⁶² According to the Commission, conferring jurisdiction on the District Court 'may be a barrier to access to justice for the most disadvantaged community in Ireland; members of the Traveller community are frequently refused admission to licensed premises and have no alternative to seeking redress in a District Court, which is less accessible than the WRC and more costly, making it prohibitive.'⁴⁶³ It recommended that 'the authorities should ... streamline procedures so that all discrimination cases, on all grounds and in all areas, are dealt with by the Workplace Relations Commission.'⁴⁶⁴

While there is no potential for awards of costs against either party in the WRC, this is not the position with regard to proceedings before the District Court or the Circuit Court.⁴⁶⁵

A further issue relates to concerns about the right to privacy; cases in the WRC are heard in private, whereas hearings in the District and Circuit Court are in public. This may be of particular importance for the grounds of sexual orientation and disability.

There is no provision under the legislation for a body (other than IHREC) to instigate complaints, which limits the potential of the equality legislation.

c) Number of discrimination cases brought to justice

In Ireland, statistics on the number of cases related to discrimination brought to justice are available.

⁴⁶⁵ Appeals from the Labour Court, gender-ground cases and applications for enforcement orders may be heard in the Circuit Court.

The WRC's annual report, which covers a broad employment rights mandate in addition to ESA, EEA and the Pensions Acts, provides overall figures for the number of 'Complaint Applications' it receives (the cases referred to it) and further breaks this down into the number of 'Specific Complaints' lodged (separate legislative breaches asserted within each complaint application).⁴⁶⁶ Of the 18 969 specific complaints received by the WRC across its entire mandate in 2020, 1 331 concerned anti-discrimination law.⁴⁶⁷ In the 2020 annual report, figures are provided for the number of complaints referred under EEA and ESA, and these are further divided into the grounds cited in those complaints. 305 ESA complaints were referred, relating to 452 discriminatory grounds. The grounds specified in those complaints were age (31), civil status (23), disability (91), family status (23), gender (45), membership of the Traveller community (51), race (76), religion (30), sexual orientation (21), and receipt of housing assistance (61). In 2019, referrals under ESA declined by 26 % compared with the previous year. This trend continued in 2020, with a 30 % reduction on the 2019 figures. In its 2019 annual report the WRC noted that the 'reasons behind this decline are unclear', and that an awareness-raising campaign was planned for 2020.⁴⁶⁸ The campaign was put on hold because of the pandemic and has been identified as a priority for 2021.⁴⁶⁹ The 1 260 grounds indicated in the 939 complaints under EEA were age (206), civil status (39), disability (290), family status (187), gender (278), membership of the Traveller community (6), race (210), religion (19), and sexual orientation (25). EEA referrals declined by 27 % in 2020 (compared with an 11 % decrease in 2019), with a 54 % drop in age-ground complaints, a 61 % decline in referrals on the religion ground, and race-ground complaints falling by 15 %.⁴⁷⁰ The reasons for these patterns are as yet unclear. In 2020, there were 18 referrals under the Pensions Acts. Data was not provided for the grounds in question.

A total of 1 629 adjudication decisions were issued across the WRC's remit in 2020; data is not provided on the proportion of them that pertained to anti-discrimination law. Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, considerably fewer hearings were conducted in 2020 than in 2019, leading to a 46 % decrease in the number of decisions delivered.⁴⁷¹ Annual reports are published on the WRC's website and are therefore available to the public.

d) Registration of national court decisions on discrimination

In Ireland, court decisions on discrimination are not registered as such by national courts.

The Courts Service of Ireland registers and publishes the number of cases processed by the courts each year, but does not provide figures for discrimination cases.⁴⁷² Many judgments of the superior courts (the High Court, the Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court) are published online.⁴⁷³ Judgments of the District Court and Circuit Court are not available to the public.

6.2 Legal standing and associations (Article 7(2) Directive 2000/43, Article 9(2) Directive 2000/78)

a) Engaging in proceedings on behalf of victims of discrimination (representing them)

In Ireland, associations, organisations and trade unions are entitled to act on behalf of victims of discrimination.

Organisations, trade unions or associations may represent complainants before the WRC and the Labour Court (as may any person authorised by the complainant).⁴⁷⁴ Only qualified lawyers have the right to represent litigants before the civil courts.⁴⁷⁵ Advocates such as officials from trade unions, organisations or associations may provide limited assistance to lay litigants with the permission of the court.⁴⁷⁶ No organisation apart from IHREC may commence own-name proceedings on behalf of victims of discrimination.

b) Engaging in proceedings in support of victims of discrimination (joining existing proceedings)

In Ireland, associations, organisations and trade unions may apply to act in support of victims of discrimination.

In the course of an investigation, if the Director General of the WRC considers it appropriate, they may 'hear persons appearing to the Director to be interested'.⁴⁷⁷ Consequently, interested third parties may be authorised to participate in proceedings by making submissions on relevant matters. To date, this has occurred very rarely. Representatives of the Irish Traveller Movement (a human rights organisation), for example, have provided expert testimony for complainants on the difficulties experienced by Travellers in gaining access to services and on other matters.⁴⁷⁸ In a reasonable accommodation case, the Equality Tribunal heard expert evidence on the structure of Irish sign language and the need for suitably qualified interpreters.⁴⁷⁹

There is no equivalent provision that would enable associations to join proceedings before the ordinary courts. Intervention in an amicus curiae capacity is theoretically possible⁴⁸⁰ but has not occurred to date in an equality law case.

c) Actio popularis

In Ireland, national law does not allow associations, organisations or trade unions to act in the public interest on their own behalf, without a specific victim to support or represent (actio popularis).

Civil society organisations, such as the Equality and Rights Alliance, have long sought the extension of standing under EEA and ESA to NGOs and trade unions.⁴⁸¹ The matter has not been considered by Parliament, however.

In the fields of constitutional law and judicial review, courts have developed the general principles on legal standing significantly over the past decades. However, just one case to date recognises an organisation's right to bring an actio popularis.⁴⁸² In Digital Rights Ireland Ltd. v Minister for Communications,⁴⁸³ the High Court held that an NGO that had incorporated as a limited company had locus standi to assert its own rights and also to bring an actio popularis in challenging legislation on data retention that could potentially affect the entire population. Standing was granted on the basis, inter alia, that 'it would be an effective way to bring the action – individual owners of mobile phones would be unlikely to litigate the matter'. In a 2020 judgment, the Supreme Court declined to grant an environmental NGO legal standing to challenge a statutory plan aimed at addressing climate change.⁴⁸⁴ It considered that constitutional actions by parties whose personal rights are not directly impacted can only be brought in exceptional circumstances where refusing standing would make the enforcement of important rights either impossible or excessively difficult.

d) Class action

In Ireland, national law does not allow associations, organisations or trade unions to act in the interest of more than one individual victim (class action) for claims arising from the same event.

When the WRC receives multiple complaints under either EEA or ESA arising from the same event, it may convene a meeting with the parties prior to the hearing with a view to investigating the claims as a single grouped case.⁴⁸⁵ This practice is adopted as a matter of administrative convenience and is not a class action.⁴⁸⁶ In a grouped case, each person involved must refer a complaint, and a decision is issued in respect of every complaint.⁴⁸⁷

6.3 Burden of proof (Article 8 Directive 2000/43, Article 10 Directive 2000/78)

In Ireland, national law requires a shift of the burden of proof from the complainant to the respondent.

Section 85(A)(1) EEA provides: 'Where in any proceedings facts are established by or on behalf of a complainant from which it may be presumed that there has been discrimination in relation to him or her, it is for the respondent to prove the contrary.' An identical provision governs cases under ESA.⁴⁸⁸ This also applies to cases brought by IHREC.⁴⁸⁹

The EEA provision expressly includes proceedings relating to indirect discrimination, victimisation and harassment, but not reasonable accommodation. However, in practice, adjudicators shift the burden of proof once a prima facie case has been established.⁴⁹⁰

The Labour Court has held that a requirement to be competent in a particular language is prima facie indirectly discriminatory on grounds of race, as it is likely to place persons whose native language is other than the required language at a disadvantage relative to persons whose native language is the required language.⁴⁹¹

6.4 Victimisation (Article 9 Directive 2000/43, Article 11 Directive 2000/78)

In Ireland, there are legal measures of protection against victimisation.

Section 74(2) EEA prohibits victimisation, which is deemed to occur where a person is dismissed or any other adverse treatment occurs because they have undertaken any of the following activities: they have made a complaint of discrimination, they have been a complainant in proceedings,⁴⁹² they are an employee who has represented or otherwise supported a complainant, they have been a comparator in an equality action, they have been a witness in proceedings under EEA or ESA, they have opposed a discriminatory act by lawful means, or they have stated an intention to take any of the preceding actions. Protection from victimisation applies even after the employment relationship has ended.⁴⁹³

Victimisation complaints may only be referred against the complainant's employer. In Association of Secondary Teachers, Ireland v Dunbar, the Labour Court determined that on the 'plain and ordinary meaning' of Section 74(2), it applies only to dismissal or other adverse treatment of an employee by his or her employer.⁴⁹⁴ The complainant, therefore, had no cause of action against a trade union.

Complaints of victimisation must be brought within 6 months of the most recent occurrence of the act.⁴⁹⁵ This may be extended to a maximum of 12 months in certain circumstances.⁴⁹⁶ The form of redress available is the same as that for discrimination claims, being a compensation award or an order that the employer take a specified course of action.⁴⁹⁷ Adjudicators consistently reiterate that victimisation is a serious matter, and successful cases tend to result in significant compensation awards.⁴⁹⁸

⁴⁹⁰ See, for example, Labour Court, Public Appointments Service v Flynn, EDA1637, 7 December 2016, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2016/December/EDA1637.html>.

⁴⁹⁶ Section 77(6)(a) EEA.

⁴⁹⁷ Section 82 EEA.

⁴⁹⁸ Compensation of EUR 25 000 was awarded to a complainant who was dismissed when she made a complaint under EEA in Labour Court, Couverture Limited v Wozniczka, EDA 182, 11 January 2018, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2018/January/EDA182.html>. Victimisation that occurred as a reaction to a previous complaint to the Equality Tribunal attracted a EUR 48 750 award in Workplace Relations Commission, Higgins v Permanent TSB Plc, DEC-E2016-037, 25 February 2016, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/Cases/2016/February/DEC-E2016-037.html>. EUR 7 000 was awarded to a self-employed worker in a 2020 case. The complainant was not offered further work after she sent a letter to the respondent complaining of discrimination: Workplace Relations Commission, A Holistic Therapist v A Provider of Holistic Therapy, ADJ-00015842, 17 August 2020, <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2020/august/adj-00015842.html>.

In two instances, victimisation may amount to a criminal offence: where a person procures or attempts to procure another person to do anything that constitutes victimisation,⁴⁹⁹ or where an employee is dismissed in circumstances amounting to victimisation.⁵⁰⁰

Victimisation is also prohibited under ESA. As with EEA, protection extends to people other than the complainant. Section 3(2)(j) applies where a person has in good faith applied for redress under the Act, has been a witness, has given evidence in criminal proceedings under the Act, has opposed by lawful means discriminatory acts, or has given notice of an intention to take any of the preceding actions.⁵⁰¹ In a 2020 case, the WRC found that the respondent's reaction to the receipt of a notification form amounted to victimisation.⁵⁰² Specifically, the respondent landlord directed its letting agent to undertake more regular inspections of the property rented by the complainant 'given the nature of this tenant and the present situation we are now in'. The respondent was directed to pay EUR 5 000 in compensation for the victimisation element of the complaint. Further, compensation of EUR 5 000 was awarded for direct discrimination on the housing assistance ground.

6.5 Sanctions and remedies (Article 15 Directive 2000/43, Article 17 Directive 2000/78)

a) Applicable sanctions in cases of discrimination – in law and in practice

Section 82 EEA provides for a broad range of remedies that are equally applicable with respect to private and public employment: compensation awards, orders for employers to take specific courses of action, an order for equal treatment in whatever respect is relevant to the case, and reinstatement or re-engagement.

In the area of goods and services, Section 27 ESA provides for the remedies of compensation and orders that a certain course of action be followed. A successful discrimination case taken against licensed premises before the District Court may attract a compensation award. The judge may also order the licensee to take 'a course of action' and has an additional power, not enjoyed by the WRC, to make an order for temporary closure of the premises.⁵⁰³

A limited range of criminal sanctions can be imposed under EEA and ESA: where a person procures another to do anything that could be considered victimisation or discrimination,⁵⁰⁴ where victimisation amounts to dismissal,⁵⁰⁵ or in a range of circumstances concerning obstruction of the Workplace Relations Commission or of IHREC in conducting inquiries.⁵⁰⁶

b) Compensation – maximum and average amounts

There are maximum limits on financial awards by the Workplace Relations Commission and the Labour Court. In the context of employment, the limits are a maximum of two years' pay, calculated on the basis of the complainant's weekly pay at the time the case was referred.⁵⁰⁷ Where the complainant was not an employee (in the case of a discriminatory interview, for example) the maximum award is EUR 13 000.⁵⁰⁸ In unequal pay cases, compensation may be awarded in the form of pay arrears, up to a maximum of three years prior to the referral of the case.⁵⁰⁹ There is no provision for the payment of interest.⁵¹⁰

The maximum award payable under ESA is linked to monetary limits on the jurisdiction of the District Court and is currently set at EUR 15 000.⁵¹¹ In a 2019 race-ground case, the maximum amount was awarded because of the 'serious and ongoing nature of the abuse and harassment' directed at a tenant.⁵¹²

A successful discrimination case taken against licensed premises before the District Court may attract a maximum award of EUR 15 000.⁵¹³

c) Assessment of the sanctions

The primary compliance issue pertains to the compensation ceilings. Claims under the gender ground are treated exceptionally; they can be taken directly to the Circuit Court and can attract higher compensation awards, since no monetary limit is applicable. It is questionable whether the remedies available in the context of non-gender-ground discrimination could generally be described as 'effective, proportionate and dissuasive' sanctions. As noted above, a cap of EUR 13 000 applies at the access or recruitment stage. The ceiling of EUR 15 000 under ESA may be inadequate for particularly egregious violations of the law in situations such as discriminatory denial of access to education.⁵¹⁴ Interest is not payable on compensation awards under ESA or for non-gender-ground EEA cases. Moreover, the general compensation limits apply even where a case of discrimination has been made out on several grounds or in cases of established discrimination as well as harassment.⁵¹⁵

IHREC is the only independent body permitted to instigate litigation under ESA and EEA,⁵¹⁶ but compensation orders may not be made in its favour.⁵¹⁷ This arguably raises a compliance issue, since the CJEU has found that national rules on sanctions implementing the Racial Equality Directive must be effective, proportionate and dissuasive, even where there is no identifiable victim.⁵¹⁸

It seems that the offence provisions of the two sets of acts have never been invoked.

Equality laws also provide for non-financial sanctions, which bolster their effectiveness since the remedy can be tailored to the particular circumstances of the case and can also generate significant effects beyond the immediate case.⁵¹⁹ Adjudicators have used this power to order persons to take a specified course of action⁵²⁰ as a means of ensuring that

7 BODIES FOR THE PROMOTION OF EQUAL TREATMENT (Article 13 Directive 2000/43)

- a) Body/bodies designated for the promotion of equal treatment irrespective of racial/ethnic origin according to Article 13 of the Racial Equality Directive

The Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission (IHREC) is Ireland's designated body for the promotion of equal treatment irrespective of racial or ethnic origin. Its mandate also extends to the other discriminatory grounds set out under domestic anti-discrimination law: age, civil status, disability, family status, gender, housing assistance, religion and sexual orientation.

IHREC was established on 1 November 2014, replacing the Equality Authority as the country's specialised equality body and the Irish Human Rights Commission as Ireland's national human rights institution.⁵²⁸

Another national body, the Office of the Ombudsman,⁵²⁹ oversees an administrative process that examines complaints about decisions, refusals to act and the procedures of public bodies.⁵³⁰ Its remit includes discrimination in access to many public services (see Chapter 6.1).

- b) Political, economic and social context of the designated body

The political, economic and social context in which IHREC operates has been relatively positive since its establishment in November 2014. There is evidence of recent political support for the Commission: the Minister for Justice and Equality acknowledged the 'important work' of the body in sanctioning increased funding to provide for the appointment of additional staff in 2017,⁵³¹ and the Government plans to introduce legislation that will confer an additional enforcement function on the Commission with respect to reporting on the gender pay gap.⁵³² This compares favourably with the experience of its predecessor equality body, the Equality Authority. The Authority's budget was drastically cut in Budget 2009 from approximately EUR 5.9 million to EUR 3.3 million, which represented a 43 % reduction. The Equality Authority's capacity to carry out the full range of its functions was severely compromised as a result.⁵³³

The Commission's budget for 2020 was EUR 6.81 million, representing an increase of 0.9 % from the previous year.⁵³⁴ Its budget will increase by a further 4 % in 2021.⁵³⁵ Nonetheless, spending on IHREC remains below what the combined budgets for the Equality Authority and the Irish Human Rights Commission were in 2007, prior to a series of cuts (EUR 5 459 million for the Equality Authority and EUR 2.342 million for the Irish Human Rights Commission).

c) Institutional architecture

In Ireland, the designated body forms part of a body with multiple mandates. IHREC has a dual status as Ireland's national human rights institution and equality body. It is also the body designated for the purposes of Directive 2014/54/EU on measures facilitating the exercise of rights conferred on workers in the context of freedom of movement for workers.⁵³⁶ The Commission is charged with protecting and promoting human rights and equality, encouraging the development of a culture of respect for human rights, equality and intercultural understanding, promoting understanding and awareness of the importance of human rights and equality, encouraging good practice in intercultural relations, promoting tolerance and acceptance of diversity and respect for the freedom and dignity of each person, and working towards the elimination of human rights abuses, discrimination and prohibited conduct.⁵³⁷

The human rights and equality functions of the body are integrated. In other words, the equality and non-discrimination mandate is not structured separately within the body, nor is a percentage of staff resources and budget dedicated to the equality mandate. Along with the director, staff assigned to each of the Commission's sections (legal, strategic engagement, policy and research and corporate services) work across the body's mandate.⁵³⁸

d) Status of the designated body/bodies – general independence

i) Status of the body

IHREC was established as a body corporate with perpetual succession under the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission Act 2014.⁵³⁹ It was accredited as an A status national human rights institution in November 2015.⁵⁴⁰

Sections 12 and 13 IHRECA provide for membership and appointment of the Commission. The Minister for Children, Equality, Disability, Integration and Youth agrees with the Public Appointments Service the selection criteria and process to be implemented in respect of filling vacancies. The Service puts in place an independent selection panel with prescribed relevant experience and including one nominee of the Director of the European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights. Following an open competition, the panel recommends people for appointment. The legislation specifies that the 'Government shall accept that recommendation' save in defined 'exceptional circumstances'⁵⁴¹ and that the members shall be appointed by the President on the advice of Government, following a resolution of the Oireachtas. While the appointments process contains checks and balances that secure its independence from Government, greater transparency could perhaps be secured by according the Oireachtas an oversight role in the appointment of the selection panel.

In terms of qualifying criteria for membership of IHRECA, the Public Appointments Service and the Government must have regard to the need to ensure that the members 'broadly reflect the nature of Irish society' and possess knowledge of or experience in matters connected with human rights and matters connected with persons or classes of persons who are disadvantaged by reference to the discriminatory grounds.⁵⁴² There must be gender balance in the composition of the 12 to 15 members. Members serve a term of three or five years. One of the members acts as the Chief Commissioner and chairs Commission meetings, which must take place at least every three months.⁵⁴³

The Commission's annual grant is a sum that the Minister for Children, Equality, Disability, Integration and Youth, after consultation with the Commission, considers to be reasonably sufficient for the Commission for the performance of its functions.⁵⁴⁴ Concerns about this provision were raised by the Sub-Committee on Accreditation of the UN's Global Alliance of National Human Rights Institutions (GANHRI), which pointed out that 'the Minister for Justice and Equality has significant discretion over the allocation of funds to the IHREC, and that this has the potential to impact on its effectiveness and independence.'⁵⁴⁵

The Commission appoints its own staff with the consent of the Minister for Children, Equality, Disability, Integration and Youth, as approved by the Minister for Public Expenditure and Reform.⁵⁴⁶ They may also be seconded from other bodies at the Commission's discretion. Staff are civil servants of the state, a status which requires independence from Government. The Director of the Commission manages its administration and is accountable to Parliament for financial and other operational matters.⁵⁴⁷ The Director holds office under a written contract of service, the terms of which, including its duration, are determined by the Commission with the approval of the Minister for Children, Equality, Disability, Integration and Youth. As of 31 December 2020, the Commission had 62 staff.⁵⁴⁸

The Commission is accountable to Parliament; it must lay its strategy statement⁵⁴⁹ and annual report⁵⁵⁰ before the Oireachtas. The Director is accountable to the parliamentary Committee of Public Accounts for financial transactions and effective use of resources⁵⁵¹ and may be requested to account for administrative matters before other Oireachtas committees.⁵⁵²

ii) Independence of the body

Legislation stipulates that the Commission shall be independent in the performance of its functions.⁵⁵³ In the author's assessment, the Commission's functions are exercised in an independent manner in practice. However, as noted above, the role of the Minister for Justice and Equality in setting the Commission's budget was identified by GANHRI as potentially impacting on its independence. Submissions concerning the establishment of IHREC suggested that its budget could be attached to a more 'neutral' department, such as the Department of the Taoiseach.⁵⁵⁴ The transfer of responsibility for IHREC's budget in 2020 to a department without a justice remit may alleviate concerns about its independence. The process for appointing Commission members could also be rendered more transparent by, for instance, according the Oireachtas an oversight role in the appointment of the selection panel.

e) Grounds covered by the designated body/bodies

IHREC has a mandate to deal with the following grounds under Irish anti-discrimination law: gender, age, race, religion, family status, disability, civil status, sexual orientation, membership of the Traveller community and receipt of housing assistance. It does not prioritise any of the grounds as such. No information is in the public domain as to how the Commission ensures that adequate and appropriate expertise and attention is given to each ground. Staff work across all of the grounds and the human rights mandate in each of the Commission's functional divisions (see Chapter 7(c)). The Commission's Strategy Statement 2019-2021 adopts a holistic approach to the grounds, save that it refers specifically to 'combatting racism' and monitoring compliance with the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities as two priority areas.⁵⁵⁵ In the author's assessment, each ground is accorded an appropriate level of attention by the Commission. It has addressed the intersection between grounds in various submissions and has called for the introduction of a provision on multiple discrimination under anti-discrimination law.⁵⁵⁶

f) Competences of the designated body/bodies – and their independent exercise

i) Independent assistance to victims

IHREC has the competence to provide independent assistance to victims.⁵⁵⁷ It does so in two primary ways: by providing general information on anti-discrimination law and through the provision of legal assistance in a limited number of cases.

IHREC is required to 'provide information to the public' on the Employment Equality Acts 1998-2015 (EEA), the Equal Status Acts 2000-2018 (ESA) and Section 19 of the Intoxicating Liquor Act 2003.⁵⁵⁸ On its website, IHREC provides an accessible overview of those laws that are aimed at the general public as well as organisations and businesses.⁵⁵⁹ It published detailed guides to EEA and ESA in 2015, which were updated in 2020.⁵⁶⁰ The Commission also operates a public information service that individuals may use to obtain information on their rights to protection against discrimination.⁵⁶¹ It processed 947 such queries from members of the public in 2020.⁵⁶²

Legal assistance can take the form of the provision (or arranging for the provision) of legal advice to the applicant, the provision (or arranging for the provision) of legal representation to the applicant or the provision of such other assistance to the applicant as the Commission deems appropriate in the circumstances.⁵⁶³ Such assistance is available, inter alia, for references of discrimination complaints under ESA, EEA and Section 19 of the ⁵⁶³ Section 40(10) IHRECA.

Intoxicating Liquor Act 2003, as well as for appellate or enforcement⁵⁶⁴ proceedings under those statutes. IHREC granted legal assistance to 77 new applicants in 2020. 22 applications were refused and 18 were withdrawn. 22 of the new applicants were granted assistance for legal advice only, with the remaining 55 also receiving legal representation. At the beginning of 2020, the Commission was providing legal advice and representation to 53 individuals, and legal advice only to a further 86 people. 26 legal assistance files pertaining to anti-discrimination law were closed in 2020.⁵⁶⁵ Seven of these comprised legal advice only, and 19 involved legal representation.

In the author's assessment, decisions on granting legal assistance are exercised in an independent manner in practice. Safeguards include the publication of the applicable criteria, the provision of a reasoned decision to applicants in writing, and the delegation of decision-making to the Head of Legal, who is a civil servant of the state. The Commission published revised guidelines for deciding on applications for assistance in 2017.⁵⁶⁶ Section 40(4) IHRECA underpins the guidelines; it stipulates that the Commission may grant assistance on the following criteria: '(a) the matter to which the proceedings concerned relate raises a question of principle; (b) it would be unreasonable to expect the person to deal with the matter to which the proceedings concerned relate without assistance because of its complexity or for any other reason; (c) there are other special circumstances which make it appropriate for the Commission to grant such assistance.' It has delegated the function of deciding on applications for assistance to staff; the Head of Legal decides whether to grant assistance, subject to an appeal to the Director.⁵⁶⁷

IHREC provides limited information to the public on how this function is exercised. Its annual reports set out the number of open case files, providing basic information on the legislative base involved and the applicable discriminatory grounds. Brief accounts of case outcomes are set out in the annual reports and are publicised in the Commission's press releases.⁵⁶⁸ It is evident from these accounts that IHREC has supported multiple significant cases, such as proceedings before the CJEU on the Workplace Relations Commission's jurisdiction,⁵⁶⁹ and before the Supreme Court on reasonable accommodation for students sitting state examinations.⁵⁷⁰ In 2019, it provided legal representation in 21 cases, which were resolved either through settlements or by way of mediation or investigation before ⁵⁶⁴ In a number of cases, the WRC has issued orders directing the respondent to report to the Commission on compliance within a given timeframe, underlining that IHREC could thereafter commence enforcement proceedings with the complainant's consent: Equality Tribunal, Sheehy Skeffington v National University of Ireland, Galway, DEC-E2014-078, 13 November 2014, <https://www.workplacelrelations.ie/en/Cases/2014/November/DEC-E2014-078.html>; Equality Tribunal, Clavin v Marks and Spencers Ireland Ltd., DEC-S2015-055, 28 July 2015, <https://www.workplacelrelations.ie/en/Cases/2015/July/DEC-E2015-055.html>; Workplace Relations Commission, A mother (on behalf of her son) v The Board of Management of a National School, DEC-S2016-048, 18 July 2016, <https://www.workplacelrelations.ie/en/Cases/2016/July/DEC-S2016-048.html>.

⁵⁶⁷ Under Section 10(6) IHRECA, the Commission may authorise its staff to perform any of its functions.

⁵⁶⁸ See <https://www.ihrec.ie/category/press-releases/>.

See further: <https://www.ihrec.ie/eu-court-of-justice-issues-landmark-equality-law-ruling/>.

⁵⁷⁰ IHREC provided legal representation before the Supreme Court to a woman who challenged the Department of Education's policy of annotating the examination transcripts of students who had been granted a spelling and grammar waiver. The Court found that the practice did not amount to disability-ground discrimination: Supreme Court, Cahill v Minister for Education and Science [2017] IESC 29, 24 May 2017, <http://www.courts.ie/Judgments.nsf/bce24a8184816f1580256ef30048ca50/37599f9dc9c7e6c3c8025812b00421aa8?OpenDocument>; see further: <https://www.ihrec.ie/supreme-court-clarifies-duties-towards-students-disability-discrimination-case/>.

the WRC.⁵⁷¹ That year, it also supported enforcement proceedings before the District Court.⁵⁷² IHREC represented 19 individuals whose cases were concluded in 2020.⁵⁷³

However, in contrast to the Equality Authority, the Commission does not provide information on overarching patterns as to the reasons for either declining or deciding to grant assistance.⁵⁷⁴ It is thus unclear what has informed the Commission's strategic approach – perhaps research findings suggesting that discrimination in a given area is endemic and persistent over time, for instance. Nor it is clear at this juncture whether IHREC supports a 'critical mass of cases', as recommended by the Council of Europe's Commissioner for Human Rights.⁵⁷⁵ Without such data it is difficult to appraise the effectiveness of IHREC's work, and the Commission risks reinforcing concerns that its approach to legal assistance is more restrictive or less well-resourced than that of the Equality Authority. The Equality Authority's legal assistance work was widely regarded as being effective in driving compliance with anti-discrimination law, and its depletion was of major concern to civil society organisations when the body was merged with the Irish Human Rights Commission.⁵⁷⁶

ii) Independent surveys and reports

IHREC has the competence to conduct independent surveys and publish independent reports. It is empowered to undertake, sponsor, commission or provide financial or other assistance for research⁵⁷⁷ and to prepare and publish, in such manner as it sees fit, reports including research reports.⁵⁷⁸

In the author's assessment this competence is effectively exercised in an independent manner in practice. The research reports produced are almost exclusively commissioned by IHREC and so carried out by independent actors. Many positions advanced within the reports are critical of the status quo. Carrying on the work of the Equality Authority, the Commission published a significant report in 2017, which analyses data on the experience of inequality derived from the equality module of the 2014 Quarterly National Household Survey, carried out by the Central Statistics Office.⁵⁷⁹ IHREC further built on that data in 2018 by co-producing reports with the Economic and Social Research Institute (ESRI), on Ethnicity and Nationality in the Irish Labour Market,⁵⁸⁰ *Disability and Discrimination in Ireland*⁵⁸¹ and Discrimination and Inequality in Housing in Ireland.⁵⁸² A 2019 report maps and analyses data on attitudes to equality and human rights derived from 125 European surveys conducted between 2000 and 2018.⁵⁸³ In 2020, the ESRI and IHREC published the findings of a list experiment, which used a survey of 1 600 individuals to identify the effects of social desirability bias.⁵⁸⁴ The Commission has also sponsored several research projects conducted by universities and by civil society bodies through its human rights and equality grants scheme (see further Chapter 7(f)(iv)).

iii) Recommendations

IHREC has the competence to make recommendations on discrimination issues. Statutory provisions empower the Commission to keep under review the adequacy and effectiveness of equality law and practice in the state;⁵⁸⁵ examine any legislative proposal and report its views on any implications for equality;⁵⁸⁶ and make recommendations to the Government on measures which should be taken to strengthen, protect and uphold equality in the state.⁵⁸⁷ These powers may be exercised on the Commission's own initiative or triggered by Government ministers.

IHREC has deployed its function to keep under review the adequacy and effectiveness of equality law and practice, through various channels including in submissions made to international treaty monitoring bodies. In 2019, it made a submission to the Department of Justice and Equality's public consultation on a review of the Prohibition of Incitement to Hatred Act 1989.⁵⁸⁸ On occasion, the Commission has issued recommendations stemming from its legal assistance work. For instance, it highlighted the need to amend ESA, following an unsuccessful challenge to the exclusion from maternity benefits of a woman who had a child by means of a surrogacy arrangement.⁵⁸⁹

In the author's assessment, this competence is effectively exercised in an independent manner in practice. Many of the recommendations put forward by the Commission to date have been openly critical of Government. Written submissions draw on an extensive range of sources, including empirical studies and international best practice. IHREC has examined numerous legislative proposals since its establishment in November 2014; four of these pertain to discrimination law.⁵⁹⁰ It is difficult to assess the impact of its discrimination law submissions since, at the conclusion of 2020, three of the legislative proposals had yet to be fully debated before Parliament. The Commission's submission on the Education (Admission to Schools) Bill 2016⁵⁹¹ highlighted its conformity with the Racial Equality Directive.⁵⁹² Two of the Commission's observations concern the Disability (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill 2016, which purports to amend Irish law to secure compliance with the UNCRPD and to add a gender identity and expression ground to anti-discrimination law more generally.⁵⁹³ The other legislative observation, issued in December 2017, welcomes the publication of a private member's bill that seeks to add 'disadvantaged socio-economic status' as a ground under national discrimination law.⁵⁹⁴

To date, the Commission has largely exercised its powers in a reactive manner. It has not conducted a review of the principal anti-discrimination statutes. However, in 2019 it began consultations for the purpose of conducting a review of section 19 of the Intoxicating Liquor Act 2003.⁵⁹⁵ It is not clear when this review will be concluded.

iv) Other competences

IHREC is empowered to prepare draft codes of practice in furtherance of, inter alia, the elimination of discrimination and the promotion of equality of opportunity.⁵⁹⁶ It is obliged to do so if requested by the Minister for Justice and Equality. In drafting codes of practice, IHREC is mandated to consult with such other Minister of the Government or such other person or body as the Commission considers appropriate, or as the Minister may recommend. If the Minister approves a code of practice, it becomes admissible in evidence in legal proceedings. In 2018, IHREC consulted with stakeholders on a draft code of practice on equal pay, which was referred to the Minister for his approval.⁵⁹⁷ As at the end of December 2020, the code of practice was under consideration, as was a revised version of the Code of Practice on Sexual Harassment and Harassment at Work.⁵⁹⁸ In October 2019, IHREC announced that it is to prepare a code of practice to promote greater employment of people with disabilities.⁵⁹⁹

IHREC may conduct equality reviews and prepare equality action plans or invite others to do so.⁶⁰⁰ An equality review comprises an audit of the level of equal opportunity within an organisation or organisations and an examination of its/their practices, procedures and other relevant factors (including the working environment).⁶⁰¹ An equality action plan is a programme of actions to be implemented to further the promotion of equality of opportunity.⁶⁰² A review or plan may relate to equality of opportunity generally or to a particular aspect of discrimination. The Commission has the power to invite a particular undertaking, group of undertakings or the undertakings making up a particular industry or sector thereof to conduct a review or prepare and implement an action plan, or both. In the case of firms with more than 50 employees, the Commission may instigate a review or prepare an action without any such invitation. An 'undertaking' for these purposes includes 'an activity giving rise to employment, whether or not in the industrial or commercial sector and whether or not with a view to profit', as well as providers of goods and services regulated by ESA, which includes educational establishments, accommodation providers and public sector bodies.⁶⁰³ IHREC may require an undertaking with 50 or more employees to supply information for the purpose of an equality review or equality action plan. It may also serve a substantive notice on an undertaking, seeking compliance with the terms of an equality action plan.⁶⁰⁴ This is a valuable mechanism in securing compliance with equality law that was employed for the first time in 2018.⁶⁰⁵ Following the 2018 reviews, IHREC issued six requests to prepare and implement equality action plans aimed at securing the cessation of less favourable treatment on the race ground in access to homeless and social housing services, the extension of the practice of non-supervision of urine samples to addiction treatment services nationwide, and the provision of interpreting services for people accessing primary healthcare. These measures were ongoing as at the end of December 2019. In 2019, the Commission requested all 31 local authorities to undertake an equality review on the provision of Traveller-specific accommodation.⁶⁰⁶ It also requested two retail banks to conduct equality reviews in relation to the provision of bank accounts to refugees and asylum seekers.⁶⁰⁷ The outcome of those reviews will be published in 2021.

The Commission oversees the implementation of the positive duty placed on public bodies under Section 42 of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission Act 2014. In exercising their functions, public bodies must have due regard to the need to: '(a) eliminate discrimination, (b) promote equality of opportunity and treatment of its staff and the persons to whom it provides services, and (c) protect the human rights of its members, staff and the persons to whom it provides services'.⁶⁰⁸ IHREC is charged with assisting public bodies to comply with the positive duty, which may include producing guidelines and preparing codes of practice.⁶⁰⁹ It published guidelines in 2019,⁶¹⁰ informed by a range of pilot measures conducted in previous years.⁶¹¹ In 2020, IHREC issued guidance on the duty and COVID-19.⁶¹² Where the Commission considers that there has been evidence of a failure by a public body to perform its functions in a manner consistent with the duty and that it is appropriate in all the circumstances to do so, it may invite the public body to carry out a review or draw up an action plan, or both. The review or action plan may relate to equality of opportunity or human rights generally, or to a particular aspect of human rights or discrimination.⁶¹³ The body must accept the Commission's invitation to trigger the review/action plan. There are no powers to compel engagement or ultimately to secure compliance with an action plan, however, and failure to comply with the duty is not otherwise actionable.⁶¹⁴ The Commission may – and, if requested by the Minister, must – carry out a review of the operation of duty.⁶¹⁵

IHREC is conferred with a number of statutory powers with respect to awareness raising, training and education. It is empowered to undertake, sponsor, commission or provide financial or other assistance for educational activities⁶¹⁶ and to provide or assist in the provision of education and training on equality issues.⁶¹⁷ Further, whether of its own volition or at the request of the Minister, it may undertake, sponsor, commission, or provide financial or other assistance for programmes of activities and projects to promote the integration of migrants and other minorities, equality (including gender equality) and respect for diversity and cultural difference.⁶¹⁸ The human rights and equality grants scheme, initiated in 2016, is one of the vehicles through which the Commission exercises these interrelated functions. 42 organisations were awarded funding for projects under the Commission's 2020 scheme, which focus on empowering people who face the greatest barriers to justice to access their rights.⁶¹⁹ In 2016, the Commission established a Professional Diploma in Human Rights and Equality, which was developed in collaboration with the Institute of Public Administration.⁶²⁰ IHREC has also sought to increase awareness of equality issues in schools. The main tool for this is a training manual designed to provide teachers with equality-based teaching resources for use across the curriculum to encourage pupils to take action on equality, human rights and social justice issues in the classroom, at school or within their wider community.⁶²¹ In 2018, the Commission published guidelines on retirement and fixed-term contracts aimed at employers and employees.⁶²²

Section 35 IHRECA equips IHREC with the power to conduct inquiries.⁶²³ The threshold is relatively high: The Commission may conduct an inquiry if it considers that—

- '(a) there is, in any body (whether public or otherwise) institution, sector of society, or geographical area, evidence of—
 - (i) a serious violation of human rights or equality of treatment obligations in respect of a person or a class of persons, or
 - (ii) a systemic failure to comply with human rights or equality of treatment obligations,
- and
- (b) the matter is of grave public concern, and
- (c) it is in the circumstances necessary and appropriate so to do.'⁶²⁴

IHRECA sets out in detail the procedures that must be followed prior to and during an inquiry. At the conclusion of an inquiry, the Commission must prepare a report containing the facts it has established and its recommendations. The report is furnished to the Minister for Justice and Equality, and its findings are subsequently published.⁶²⁵ This power has not been deployed to date. IHREC took decisions with respect to 23 requests to conduct an inquiry in 2015 and 2016, declining each one. According to its 2016 annual report, the 'majority of requests did not meet the threshold for intervention by the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission as set out in section 35'.⁶²⁶ In 2016, the Commission adopted a resolution on requests for inquiries, which underscores that only the Minister has the statutory right to seek an inquiry and that it will not in general conduct an assessment of Inclusion Ireland, a national rights-based advocacy organisation that works to promote the rights of people with an intellectual disability, has criticised IHREC's failure to conduct an inquiry into the ongoing institutionalisation of thousands of persons with an intellectual disability, as well as the process by which the Commission dealt with its request for an inquiry. See Inclusion Ireland (2018), Deinstitutionalisation in Ireland; a failure to act, <http://www.inclusionireland.ie/sites/default/files/attach/basic-page/1655/deinstitutionalisation-ireland-failure-act.pdf>.

the merits or otherwise of requests that it conduct an inquiry made by persons other than the Minister.⁶²⁷ IHREC's most recent annual report, which covers 2019, does not reference the inquiry power. However, its strategy statement, issued in February 2019, includes use of the power as one of the Commission's objectives for 2019-2021.⁶²⁸

The Commission is empowered to consult with such national, European Union or international bodies or agencies having a knowledge or expertise in the field of human rights or equality as it sees fit.⁶²⁹

Finally, a residual provision under IHRECA provides that the Commission shall have all such powers as are necessary or expedient for the performance of its functions.⁶³⁰ IHREC has invoked that provision in issuing resolutions on its approach to its statutory functions.⁶³¹

g) Legal standing of the designated body/bodies

IHREC has legal standing to:

- bring discrimination complaints on behalf of identified victims to court;
- bring discrimination complaints on behalf of non-identified victims to court;
- bring discrimination complaints ex officio to court;
- intervene in legal cases concerning discrimination, for example as amicus curiae.

Section 85 EEA empowers IHREC to refer certain cases to the WRC, which are dealt with as if they had been referred by an individual complainant. IHREC may instigate complaints with respect to discriminatory advertising or the procurement of victimisation or discrimination (Section 85(d)-(f)). In such cases, there may be no actual victim. IHREC is also empowered, under Section 85(a)-(c), to refer a complaint to the WRC where it appears to the Commission:

- that discrimination or victimisation is being generally practised against persons or that an employer has applied or operated discriminatory rules or instructions;
- that discrimination or victimisation has occurred in relation to a particular person who has not made a reference to the WRC and that it is not reasonable to expect that person to make such a reference;
- that there is a failure to comply with an equal remuneration term or an equality clause either generally in a business or in relation to a particular person who has not made a reference and it is not reasonable to expect them to make such a reference.

Under Section 86 EEA, IHREC may refer a collective agreement to the WRC where it is considered that any provision of the agreement is discriminatory. The legislation does not specify whether the consent of persons affected by the purported discrimination must be obtained by IHREC.

Similar provisions enable IHREC to refer cases under ESA to the WRC (Section 23 ESA). IHREC may also apply to the District Court for a determination as to whether a club is a discriminating club under Section 8(3) ESA.

To date, the Commission has referred two cases to the WRC. Both involve discriminatory advertising complaints taken against companies under Section 23 ESA on the housing assistance, family status and age grounds. One case was settled prior to hearing,⁶³² and the other resulted in a successful determination before the WRC in 2019.⁶³³

Section 100(3) EEA and Section 41(1) ESA empower IHREC to institute summary proceedings for an offence under any provision of that legislation. It seems that this power has not been deployed to date.

Section 41(1) IHRECA empowers the Commission to 'institute proceedings in any court of competent jurisdiction for the purpose of obtaining relief of a declaratory or other nature in respect of any matter concerning the human rights of any person or class of persons.' Declarations of unconstitutionality are expressly envisaged under Section 42(2). The reference to relief of another nature should allow a court to award a range of remedies such as damages and injunctions, depending on the legal basis of the proceedings. 'Human rights' are defined for this purpose as those guaranteed under the Irish Constitution, the European Convention on Human Rights Act 2003 or under 'any agreement, treaty or convention to which the State is a party and which has been given the force of law in the State' (Section 29 IHRECA). This definition should be broad enough to enable IHREC to litigate on compliance with EU equality provisions. However, because Section 41 has not been invoked to date, its parameters are unclear. In particular, it remains to be seen whether the reference to a 'class of persons' enables IHREC to bring an actio popularis or whether a court will require identifiable victims. A provision in the Heads of Bill had clarified that it would not 'be necessary for the Commission to name or identify the class of persons individually and a class of persons shall be constituted by more than one person in relation to whom the same relief is sought.'⁶³⁴ However, this provision was omitted from the legislation passed by the Oireachtas.

IHREC can intervene in legal cases concerning discrimination, but its express power to apply for liberty to appear as amicus curiae is confined to proceedings before the Superior Courts (the High Court, the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeal).⁶³⁵ The vast bulk of discrimination cases are litigated at the Workplace Relations Commission and the Labour Court, while several significant cases come before courts of local and limited jurisdiction. The express power to intervene in those forums would, therefore, be useful and would enable IHREC to contribute to the development of discrimination law principles without having to instigate or fund litigation. In 2006, the Supreme Court held that the Equality Authority had an implied power to apply to court to act as amicus in proceedings relating to its statutory functions.⁶³⁶ It would seem, therefore, that IHREC could seek to assert a similar power with respect to legal proceedings before any tribunal or court. With respect to WRC proceedings, IHREC may be able to intervene by way of a generic provision under Irish anti-discrimination law, which stipulates that, in the course of an investigation, if the Director of the WRC considers it appropriate, they may 'hear persons appearing to the Director to be interested'.⁶³⁷ The provision has been used, albeit rarely, to introduce third party expert testimony in first instance discrimination law proceedings, but it seems that ⁶³⁵ Under Section 10(2)(e) IHRECA, IHREC may apply to the High Court or the Supreme Court for liberty to appear before that court as amicus curiae in proceedings that involve or are concerned with the human rights or equality rights of any person. IHREC may also apply to the Court of Appeal for liberty to appear before it as amicus curiae: Section 44(1) IHRECA transferred the power set out under Section 8(h) of the Human Rights Commission Act 2000 to IHREC.

It should also be noted that, under IHRECA, the Commission 'shall have all such powers as are necessary or expedient for the performance of its functions': Section 10(5) IHRECA, <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/eli/2014/act/25/section/10/enacted/en/html#sec10>.

it has never been invoked by IHREC or by its predecessor equality body.⁶³⁸ In order to ensure that the provision could be activated by IHREC in practice, a procedure for notifying it of discrimination law proceedings should be put in place.⁶³⁹

Drawing on its express statutory power, IHREC has acted as amicus curiae before the Superior Courts in numerous cases since its establishment.⁶⁴⁰ Liberty to appear is at the discretion of the court. IHREC published revised guidelines on the exercise of its amicus curiae function in 2016.⁶⁴¹ The bulk of the Commission's amicus curiae work falls under the rubric of its human rights mandate. Over 2018 and 2019, it intervened in one case concerning discrimination, Daly v Nano Nagle School, in which the Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court assessed the parameters of the duty to provide reasonable accommodation to disabled employees.⁶⁴²

It is difficult to appraise the Commission's exercise of its competence to initiate litigation at this juncture. Several of its powers in this regard have yet to be invoked, and the Commission has not publicly explained why this is the case. Notably, IHREC exercised two sets of other statutory powers for the first time in 2018 (pertaining to equality reviews and codes of practices). It may well be that increased use of litigation powers will follow as the Commission has moved out of its development phase and will embark on a third cycle of strategic planning in 2021.

h) Quasi-judicial competences

i) Registration by the body/bodies of complaints and decisions

IHREC does not register the number of complaints of discrimination made, nor decisions (by ground, field, type of discrimination, etc.). The Commission does not process discrimination complaints. Complaints are referred to a quasi-judicial tribunal, the Workplace Relations Commission (see Chapter 6.1). IHREC reports on complaints and decisions in which it has acted. These data are published in its annual report and are available to the public; the Commission's annual reports are available on its website.

j) Roma and Travellers

IHREC does not treat Roma and Travellers as a priority issue.⁶⁴³ To date, the Commission has adopted a holistic approach to the discriminatory grounds.

8 IMPLEMENTATION ISSUES

8.1 Dissemination of information, dialogue with NGOs and between social partners

The Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission is the primary vehicle through which Ireland implements non-discrimination law. IHREC has several statutory powers and functions pertaining to dissemination of information about legal protection against discrimination and relating to dialogue between the social partners and with NGOs.

- a) Dissemination of legal protection against discrimination (Article 10 Directive 2000/43 and Article 12 Directive 2000/78)

IHREC is required to 'provide information to the public' and to keep under review the effectiveness of the working of the Employment Equality Acts 1998-2015, the Equal Status Acts 2000-2018, and Section 19 of the Intoxicating Liquor Act 2003.⁶⁴⁴ On its website, IHREC provides an accessible overview of those laws aimed at the general public⁶⁴⁵ as well as organisations and businesses.⁶⁴⁶ It published updated versions of detailed guides to EEA and ESA in 2020.⁶⁴⁷ Its predecessor equality body, the Equality Authority, did not have a statutory duty to provide information to the public on Section 19, which relates to discrimination in licensed premises. The Commission provides some basic information on the operation of discrimination law in that context but gives little information on the operation of the District Court.⁶⁴⁸ It remains to be seen whether IHREC will further develop its information function in that regard.

The Commission also operates a public information service that individuals may avail of to obtain information on their rights to protection against discrimination.⁶⁴⁹ It processed 947 such queries in 2020, 610 of which concerned ESA, with 9 relating to discrimination in licensed premises and the remaining 328 queries pertaining to EEA.⁶⁵⁰

- b) Measures to encourage dialogue with NGOs with a view to promoting the principle of equal treatment (Article 12 Directive 2000/43 and Article 14 Directive 2000/78)

IHREC fosters dialogue with NGOs in implementing its mandate, which is underpinned by several statutory provisions that direct or enable the Commission to consult with 'relevant agencies and civil society'. An overarching obligation to engage with stakeholders is set out under Section 18(1) IHRECA, which provides:

'The Commission shall, for the purpose of establishing and maintaining effective co-operation with representatives of relevant agencies and civil society—
(a) appoint such and so many advisory committees as it thinks fit to assist and advise it on matters relating to its functions, and
(b) support, establish or participate in such networks, public consultation processes or public forums, as it sees appropriate.'⁶⁵¹

The Government frequently establishes consultation mechanisms to receive input from civil society organisations on major law reform initiatives in the field of equality. Consultations are principally conducted by the Department of Children, Equality, Disability, Integration and Youth, which assumed the equality functions of the former Department of Justice and Equality in October 2020.⁶⁵²

- c) Measures to promote dialogue between social partners to give effect to the principle of equal treatment within workplace practices, codes of practice and workforce monitoring (Article 11 Directive 2000/43 and Article 13 Directive 2000/78)

Pursuant to Section 18 IHRECA, the Commission established an advisory committee comprising social partners in 2017.⁶⁵³ The Worker and Employer Advisory Committee comprises representatives nominated by the Irish Congress of Trade Unions (ICTU) and by the Irish Business and Employers' Confederation (IBEC), as well as Commission members. It advises IHREC on equality and human rights issues in the workplace and in service provision. The Committee met three times in 2020 to consider matters such as the impact of COVID-19 and the implementation of the public sector equality and human rights duty.⁶⁵⁴

IHREC is empowered to prepare codes of practice in furtherance of the elimination of discrimination and the promotion of equality of opportunity (see further Chapter 7(f)(iv)). In drafting codes of practice, IHREC is mandated to consult with such other persons or bodies as it considers appropriate.⁶⁵⁵ To date, the only approved code of practice produced by an Irish equality body is that concerning sexual harassment and harassment at work.⁶⁵⁶ It was generated after consultation with IBEC, ICTU and other relevant organisations representing equality interests. IHREC updated this code in 2019. It and a draft code of practice on equal pay await ministerial approval (see Chapter 7(f)(iv)).

- d) Addressing the situation of Roma and Travellers

A revised National Traveller and Roma Inclusion Strategy (NTRIS) was published in 2017.⁶⁵⁷ Monitoring is led by the Department of Children, Equality, Disability, Integration and Youth. A steering committee, which is chaired by the Minister for Children, Equality, Disability, Integration and Youth, meets quarterly to report on the implementation of the strategy. This committee comprises officials from relevant Government departments, as well as Traveller and Roma civil society organisations. An independent review of NTRIS, to be conducted in 2021, will inform the preparation of a successor strategy.⁶⁵⁸ The second Civil Society Monitoring Report was published in 2019.⁶⁵⁹ It focuses on the domains of employment, education, accommodation, and health. According to the report, there has been no tangible improvement in the situation and experience of Roma and Travellers, while accommodation circumstances have deteriorated within the wider context of a national housing crisis. It underscores that the Strategy lacks a rigorous monitoring and evaluation framework. These concerns are shared by the UN Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination. In December 2019, it called on the Government to fully implement the NTRIS 'including by developing concrete actions plans with clear targets, indicators, outcomes, time frames and a budget line for the implementation and putting in place a mechanism to coordinate and monitor the implementation.⁶⁶⁰ The most recent Civil Society Monitoring Report, published in 2020, underscores the urgent need to adopt a National Traveller Health Action Plan in line with action 73 of the NTRIS.⁶⁶¹ Consultation was undertaken in 2018, and a draft plan has been produced, but the final version is yet to be published.⁶⁶² An action plan aimed at increasing Traveller participation in higher education was launched in November 2019.⁶⁶³

8.2 Measures to ensure compliance with the principle of equal treatment (Article 14 Directive 2000/43, Article 16 Directive 2000/78)

a) Compliance of national legislation (Articles 14(a) and 16(a))

In general, Ireland has taken the necessary measures to ensure that any laws, regulations and administrative provisions contrary to the principle of equal treatment are abolished (Article 14(a) of Directive 2000/43 and Article 16(a) of Directive 2000/78).

This has largely occurred in the process of transposing the directives and amending legislation subsequently to align domestic law with the directives. No provision of Irish anti-discrimination law has the effect of striking out or disapplying primary or secondary legislation. However, IHREC is obliged to keep the effectiveness of anti-discrimination law under review and, whenever it thinks necessary, to make proposals to the Minister for amending that legislation (see further Chapter 7(f)(iii)).⁶⁶⁴

b) Compliance of other rules/clauses (Articles 14(b) and 16(b))

Under Section 30 EEA, all employment contracts are deemed to have an equality clause that transforms any provisions of the contracts that would otherwise give rise to unlawful discrimination.⁶⁶⁵ All discriminatory provisions in collective agreements are deemed null and void; it is not possible to contract out of the terms of the equality legislation.⁶⁶⁶ IHREC or a person who is affected by a collective agreement may refer it to the WRC.⁶⁶⁷

While it is the case that discriminatory clauses are not valid, the reality is that this fact may only be established through litigation. Where an adjudicator determines that the clause in question is contrary to the legislation, that part of the collective agreement or contract cannot be enforced and must be modified.⁶⁶⁸

IHREC may conduct equality reviews and prepare equality action plans. This is a valuable mechanism in securing compliance with EEA and ESA, which was employed by IHREC in 2018 and 2019.⁶⁶⁹

9 COORDINATION AT NATIONAL LEVEL

The Department of Justice and Equality coordinated issues regarding anti-discrimination on the grounds covered until October 2020, when its equality functions were transferred to the Department of Children, Equality, Disability, Integration and Youth.⁶⁷⁰ The Department provides secretariat support to several committees charged with overseeing implementation of given strategies and policies.

There is currently no national action plan or strategy against racism or discrimination. The *National Action Plan against Racism 2005-2008*⁶⁷¹ has not been renewed since its expiry, contrary to the recommendations of several international human rights bodies. Reports on Ireland's record under three international human rights conventions were published in 2019. Each monitoring body called for the adoption of a new national strategy against racism.⁶⁷² There are, however, several national plans that deal with discrete groups who experience discrimination, such as the Migrant Integration Strategy 2017-2020,⁶⁷³ the National Traveller and Roma Inclusion Strategy 2017-2021,⁶⁷⁴ the National Disability Inclusion Strategy 2017 - 2021,⁶⁷⁵ and the National LGBTI+ Inclusion Strategy 2019 - 2021.⁶⁷⁶

The Government formed in 2020 committed to producing a national action plan against racism, and to developing an updated migrant integration strategy.⁶⁷⁷ An independent anti-racism committee was established in June 2020.⁶⁷⁸ It is charged with drawing up a new national action plan against racism. A draft plan is to be submitted to the Government in 2021.

10 CURRENT BEST PRACTICES

- Section 42 of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission Act 2014 introduced a positive duty on public bodies to have due regard to human rights and equality in exercising their functions. IHREC is charged with assisting public bodies to comply with the duty, and to that end has produced guidelines and other resources for duty bearers.⁶⁷⁹
- IHREC operates a human rights and equality grants scheme, which provides opportunities for funded research, education and training projects to be conducted by civil society organisations.⁶⁸⁰
- The WRC and the Labour Court have interpreted the prohibition of direct discrimination on the race ground as requiring different treatment to take account of linguistic and cultural barriers experienced by potentially vulnerable migrant workers.⁶⁸¹
- No fees are payable by complainants before the first instance forum for discrimination law cases under ESA and EEA.⁶⁸²
- The availability of non-financial sanctions as redress under EEA and ESA enables remedies to have an impact beyond the parties to the case, since they may entail changes to respondents' practices and procedures.⁶⁸³

No best practices were identified in relation to the use of artificial intelligence.

⁶⁸⁰ See further Chapter 7(f)(iv).

11 SENSITIVE OR CONTROVERSIAL ISSUES

11.1 Potential breaches of the directives at the national level

Both acts:

- In a 2015 judgment, the Supreme Court considered the interpretation of indirect discrimination under ESA for the first time and held that statistical analysis is required in order to establish that a person belonging to a protected group is at a 'particular disadvantage' compared with others.⁶⁸⁴ This evidential requirement appears to be more restrictive than the provisions on the burden of proof provided for in the directives.⁶⁸⁵ (Article 8, Directive 2000/43; Article 10, Directive 2000/78)
- The setting of maximum levels of compensation and the failure to provide for the payment of interest mean that the acts are arguably not in compliance with the directives.⁶⁸⁶ (Article 15, Directive 2000/43; Article 17, Directive 2000/78)

Employment Equality Acts 1998-2015

- The provisions of the acts may not adequately prohibit discrimination on the grounds of religion or belief, since only religious beliefs appear to be covered.⁶⁸⁷ (Articles 1 and 2, Directive 2000/78)
- '[P]ersons employed in another person's home for the provision of personal services' are excluded from protection against discrimination in regard to access to employment.⁶⁸⁸ (Article 3, Directive 2000/43; Article 3, Directive 2000/78)
- The definition of 'vocational training' may be too restrictive.⁶⁸⁹ (Article 3, Directive 2000/43; Article 3, Directive 2000/78)
- It is not discriminatory to pay a disabled person a lesser rate of remuneration.⁶⁹⁰ (Articles 2 and 3, Directive 2000/78)

Equal Status Acts 2000-2018

- It is not certain that the scope of ESA fully covers social protection and social advantages.⁶⁹¹ (Article 3, Directive 2000/43)
- Putative discriminatory treatment required by law cannot be challenged under ESA.⁶⁹² (Article 3, Directive 2000/43)
ESA complaints must be instigated within two months of the discriminatory act by sending a written notification to the alleged discriminator. A substantial number of cases are dismissed annually for failure to comply with that requirement, raising potential compliance issues with the Racial Equality Directive provisions on defence of rights.⁶⁹³ (Article 7, Directive 2000/43)
- The transfer of jurisdiction regarding discrimination in access to premises licensed for the sale of alcohol from the Equality Tribunal to the District Court under the Intoxicating Liquor Act 2003 raises issues of compliance with the non-regression provisions of Article 15 of the Racial Equality Directive, due to the prohibitive cost and relative complexity of court proceedings.⁶⁹⁴

11.2 Other issues of concern

It appears that persons with irregular or undocumented migration status are not afforded protection against discrimination under EEA.⁶⁹⁶

The National Action Plan Against Racism, which had provided strategic direction to combating racism and to promoting a more inclusive, intercultural society in Ireland, was not renewed.⁶⁹⁷ A committee was, however, established in 2020 to produce a draft new plan.

Research on people's experiences of discrimination suggests that high levels of discrimination are experienced by certain sectors of Irish society. For instance, it was reported that Travellers were over 22 times more likely to encounter discrimination in access to private services than those who identified as 'White Irish'. Skin colour, rather than nationality, appears to increase the likelihood of adverse treatment in the workplace and in accessing services, with black respondents reporting significantly higher levels of discrimination than their white counterparts of any nationality. People with disabilities are twice as likely as non-disabled people to experience discrimination in all domains. These data were drawn from the responses of 15 000 adults collected for the equality module of the 2014 Quarterly National Household Survey, carried out by the Central Statistics Office. Survey participants were asked whether, in the previous two years, they had experienced discrimination in the workplace, while seeking work or in accessing services from public or private sector providers.⁶⁹⁸

A National Roma Needs Assessment, commissioned by the Department of Justice and Equality, was published in 2018.⁶⁹⁹ The report was based on qualitative data derived from interviews with 108 Roma respondents, eight focus groups involving Roma representatives from a wide range of civil society organisations and statutory agencies, and 30 in-depth interviews with policymakers, practitioners, service providers and civil society representatives working with Roma. It found that members of the Roma community face high levels of discrimination, marginalisation, extreme poverty and social exclusion. Discrimination was a core issue in the research:

'Respondents reported feeling discriminated against at both an institutional and individual level. The highest rates of perceived discrimination were reported in accessing accommodation (93 %) and social protection (84.3 %). 81.1 % of respondents also reported experiencing racism and verbal abuse in public spaces with women being identified as particularly vulnerable. A high rate of respondents (77.5 %) said that they were stopped by the Gardaí for ID checks; focus group discussions uncovered a fear of and lack of trust in the Gardaí.'⁷⁰⁰

No issues of concern were identified in relation to the use of artificial intelligence. However, in the absence of case law, it is unclear whether the domestic legal framework can address discrimination that arises from the application of algorithms.⁷⁰¹

⁷⁰¹ There are concerns, for example, about access to the evidence required to establish a prima facie case of indirect discrimination, how the burden of proof would be applied, and how objective justification would be interpreted in this context. See Foale, N. (2020), 'Back to the Future: How Well Equipped is Irish Employment Equality Law to Adapt to Artificial Intelligence?', Trinity College Law Review, vol. 23, pp. 170-198.

12 LATEST DEVELOPMENTS IN 2020

12.1 Legislative amendments

There were no amendments to Irish anti-discrimination legislation in 2020.

12.2 Case law⁷⁰²

Relevant discrimination ground: Age

Name of the court: Workplace Relations Commission

Date of decision: 5 October 2020

Name of the parties: Boyle v Commissioner of An Garda Síochána and the Minister for Justice, Equality and Law Reform; Fitzpatrick v Commissioner of An Garda Síochána and the Minister for Justice, Equality and Law Reform

Reference number: DEC-E2020-003; DEC-E2020-002

<https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2020/october/dec-e2020-002.html>

Brief summary: The decisions in these two related cases were issued some 15 years after the litigation commenced. The complainants sought to join the Garda Síochána (police force) in 2005 and 2007 respectively. Their applications were not considered because secondary legislation set 35 as the upper age limit for entry as a trainee.⁷⁰³ Complaints were referred to the Equality Tribunal (since replaced by the Workplace Relations Commission), arguing that the legislative provision breached the prohibition of age discrimination under the Employment Equality Act 1998. However, the proceedings were stayed pending the resolution of judicial review proceedings, which resulted in the Supreme Court referring the matter to the Court of Justice of the European Union (CJEU). The CJEU was asked to determine whether the Workplace Relations Commission (WRC), as a quasi-judicial tribunal tasked with giving effect to EU law, had the authority to disapply Irish legislation that conflicts with EU law. In 2018, the CJEU held that the WRC was so empowered, and consequently the two cases could proceed.⁷⁰⁴

The WRC found that the complainants had established a prima facie case of discrimination since their applications had been rejected solely because of their age. It then assessed whether the age threshold was justified under Section 37(2) and/or Section 34(5) EEA. Section 37(2) transposes Article 4(1) of Directive 2000/78 as follows:

'(2) For the purposes of this Part a difference of treatment which is based on a characteristic related to any of the discriminatory grounds (except the gender ground) shall not constitute discrimination where, by reason of the particular occupational activities concerned or of the context in which they are carried out—
(a) the characteristic constitutes a genuine and determining occupational requirement, and
(b) the objective is legitimate and the requirement proportionate.'

In accordance with Article 6(1)(c) of Directive 2000/78, Section 34(5) provides that 'it shall not constitute discrimination on the age ground to set, in relation to any job, a maximum age for recruitment which takes account of—

(a) any cost or period of time involved in training a recruit to a standard at which the recruit will be effective in that job, and
(b) the need for there to be a reasonable period of time prior to retirement age during which the recruit will be effective in that job.'

⁷⁰² This section comprises a selection of significant cases that are referred to in the body of the report.

⁷⁰³ Garda Síochána (Admissions and Appointments) (Amendment) Regulations 2004.

⁷⁰⁴ Judgment of 4 December 2018, C-378/17, Minister for Justice and Equality and The Commissioner of the Garda Síochána v Workplace Relations Commission.

The WRC applied the test set out in Case C-229/08, Wolf v Stadt Frankfurt am Main. It determined that the upper age limit pursued the legitimate objective of ensuring the ongoing and proper functioning and operation of the Garda Síochána. Citing Wolf and Sorondo (Case C-258/15), the WRC concluded that physical fitness is an age-related genuine occupational requirement. However, the WRC found that the age limit was not proportionate. It noted that the respondent did not provide data on the fitness levels of members of the Garda Síochána in 2005 and 2007, when the complaints were referred. Such data was unavailable because, at that time, trainees were required to attain a certain level of physical fitness during training and were not tested subsequently. Because an exception to the principle of equal treatment was in issue, the respondent could not rely on generalisations. The respondent had not shown that a significant number of Gardaí would be unable to perform physically demanding tasks if the upper age limit did not apply. Consequently, the respondent could not demonstrate that the upper age limit was necessary in ensuring the operational capacity and proper functioning of the police service. The WRC was satisfied that individualised assessment of members' physical capacities would be feasible and would not amount to a significant imposition on the respondent, from either a logistical or financial perspective.

Furthermore, the respondent had not shown that the maximum recruitment age could be justified based on training requirements or on the need for a reasonable period of employment before retirement. It did not supply evidence of the costs associated with the training programme in place at the relevant time. For that reason, the WRC found that the Garda Commissioner had failed to discharge the burden of proof.

Both complainants were awarded EUR 12 700 in compensation, the maximum possible under the legislative provisions in force when the complaints were initially referred. The Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission, which provided legal representation to the complainants, welcomed the decisions, noting that the WRC had 'effectively disapplied national law which does not comply with EU law in line with the important judgment of the European Court delivered in 2018.'⁷⁰⁵ It called on the Government to review the age limit.⁷⁰⁶ In reply to a parliamentary question, the Minister for Justice announced that an expert review group had been established to examine the recruitment age amongst other matters and that it would report to the Garda Commissioner in 2021.⁷⁰⁷

Brief summary: This was one of several unsuccessful cases taken by former members of the Garda Síochána (police force), who challenged a mandatory retirement age set out in secondary legislation. The complaint was lodged in 2008, but the proceedings were stayed pending the outcome of the High Court case referred to below and, subsequently, a preliminary reference to the CJEU. In 2018, the CJEU determined that the WRC has the authority to disapply Irish legislation that conflicts with EU law, and so the case was eventually heard by the WRC.⁷⁰⁸

⁷⁰⁸ Judgment of 4 December 2018, Minister for Justice and Equality and the Commissioner of the Garda Síochána v Workplace Relations Commission, C-378/17, <http://curia.europa.eu/juris/document/document.jsf?text=&docid=208381&pageIndex=0&doclang=en&mode=req&dir=&occ=first&part=1&cid=152514>.

The complainant held the rank of superintendent. Regulations set a mandatory retirement age of 60 and empowered the Garda Commissioner to extend an individual's employment for a maximum of five years in the interests of efficiency and where the member possessed qualifications and experience warranting such extension.⁷⁰⁹ The complainant's request for an extension was unsuccessful. He lodged a discrimination complaint, arguing that the compulsory retirement age contravened EEA and Article 2(2) of Directive 2000/78.

Arguments before the WRC centred on whether the legal provision was objectively justified in accordance with Section 34(4) EEA, which provides that 'it shall not constitute discrimination on the age ground to fix different ages for the retirement (whether voluntarily or compulsorily) of employees or any class or description of employees if— (i) it is objectively and reasonably justified by a legitimate aim, and (ii) the means of achieving that aim are appropriate and necessary.'

The complainant pointed to changes in the retirement age across the civil and public service and submitted that the role of superintendent was comparable in that it is not a directly operational or confrontational one. However, the WRC was satisfied that the retirement age was objectively justified. Its investigation centred on the circumstances and procedures in place in 2008 when the complaint was initially referred. Significantly, the respondent had undertaken a review of retirement ages in 2007. The resultant report concluded that extending the retirement age would create a hiatus in the succession process, which could lead to a loss of morale among members seeking positions in the officer ranks and could cause them to leave the force because of limited career advancement prospects.

In line with Palacios de la Villa (Case C-411/05) and other CJEU authorities, the WRC noted that ensuring motivation and dynamism through the increased prospect of promotion was a legitimate aim. It found that imposing a mandatory retirement age was an appropriate and necessary means of achieving that aim in 2008, given the structure of the force as set out in the 2007 review and the Commissioner's power to extend an individual's employment, and because, on attaining 30 years' service, members of the force could retire on a full pension. In reaching that conclusion the WRC referred to a 2008 High Court judgment, which upheld a mandatory retirement age for the rank of Assistant Commissioner in the Garda Síochána.⁷¹⁰ In assessing proportionality, that judgment placed particular emphasis on the same provision at issue in the instant case, which enabled a possible extension of employment that was individually assessed. The High Court held that this procedure 'serves to temper the severity of what would otherwise be an absolute retirement age; thereby rendering it ... proportionate. It cannot therefore be entirely equated with a blanket policy type position.'⁷¹¹

⁷¹¹ High Court, Donnellan v Minister for Justice, Equality and Law Reform [2008] IEHC 467, 25 July 2008, Para. 122.

The complainant was employed as a prison officer. Because of back injuries sustained at work, he was deemed unfit for prisoner contact duties. He was advised that he could either return to work at a different grade in an administrative position, or avail of ill-health retirement. The complainant did not wish to avail of either option. He sought to return to the same position but with restricted duties. His discrimination complaint was successful at first instance. The WRC held that the employer had not complied with its obligation to provide reasonable accommodation under Section 16 EEA, because it had failed to engage with the complainant in exploring a range of measures that might have afforded him the opportunity to return to work.⁷¹² On appeal, the Labour Court overturned that finding.⁷¹³ In deciding the case, it concluded that Section 37(3) EEA exempts the prison service from the reasonable accommodation duty in circumstances where an employee is not capable of carrying out the full range of functions required of prison officers. Section 37(3) EEA provides:

'It is an occupational requirement for employment in the Garda Síochána, prison service or any emergency service that persons employed therein are fully competent and available to undertake, and fully capable of undertaking, the range of functions that they may be called upon to perform so that the operational capacity of the Garda Síochána or the service concerned may be preserved.'

The High Court held that the Labour Court had not interpreted the law correctly and had also erred in deciding the matter without making any findings of fact.

Mr Justice Barr noted that, prior to the insertion of Section 37(3) in 2004, the Irish Prison Service (IPS) had a 'complete exemption' from discrimination on the disability ground. The subsection removed that exemption while recognising the distinct functions of, inter alia, the prison service by providing for an occupational requirement. According to the High Court, Section 37(3) does not relieve an employer of the obligation to provide reasonable accommodation:

'I accept the submission of counsel on behalf of the appellant that s.37.3 does not exempt the emergency services from providing reasonable accommodation, but merely enables them to satisfy the first limb of the test set down in cases such as Egenburger and Wolf, that capacity to carry out the range of functions required is an occupational requirement for employment in the particular emergency service, in this case in the IPS. However, the section does not absolve the IPS of the duty of providing reasonable accommodation for the disabled person, if that can reasonably be done and while at the same time preserving the operational capacity of the prison service.' (Paragraph 80)

In considering the relationship between the reasonable accommodation duty and the occupational requirement, the judge underlined that the law should be interpreted in light of Directive 2000/78 and UNCRPD, which were aimed at securing 'rights of real substance' to people with disabilities.

The High Court further noted that the only fact agreed between the parties was that Mr Cunningham was no longer able to undertake control and restraint duties. The complainant maintained that posts were available within the prison service which did not require officers to carry out such duties. Mr Justice Barr found that the hearing before the Labour Court was 'unsatisfactory and unfair' because the complainant was not afforded the opportunity to advance such arguments and contest the respondent's assertions as to the operational capacity of the prison service.

Reference number: ADJ-00022851

Link: <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2020/june/adj-00022851.html>

Brief summary: The complainant had been employed by the respondent as an executive assistant since 1998. Between 2015 and 2018, she was out of work on a combination of illness leave and maternity leave. The complainant had been diagnosed with obsessive compulsive disorder (OCD) and experienced significant anxiety about contamination when using the toilet facilities at work. In April 2018, three months prior to her scheduled return to work, she contacted the respondent seeking reasonable accommodation and was referred to its occupational health doctor. An initial appointment with that physician took place in June. Thereafter the complainant attended several meetings with human resources as well as medical appointments with her consultant psychiatrist and the respondent's occupational health service. Working from home on a part-time basis was consistently raised by the complainant as a means of accommodating her disability, as recommended by her psychiatrist. However, the respondent declined to permit such an arrangement. In November 2018, the complainant returned to work for four hours per day on a phased basis. She experienced significant difficulties on returning to work and ultimately resigned in early 2019.

The WRC found that, in not assessing the possibility of the complainant working from home, the respondent had failed to provide her with reasonable accommodation. It noted that another staff member had been permitted to work from home for a short period, and the respondent failed to explain why that option was not feasible for the complainant.

Compensation of EUR 60 000 was awarded, the equivalent of one and a half years' salary.

Brief summary: The complainant made an advance booking for her wedding at the respondent hotel and paid a deposit after viewing the venue. Some days later she was informed that the booking had been cancelled because of scheduled renovation works. The complainant sought to be accommodated on alternative dates, but the respondent declined to propose any alternative dates on the basis that the function room was fully booked prior to the renovation and that it was not accepting any further bookings for wedding receptions.

The Workplace Relations Commission upheld a complaint of direct discrimination on the Traveller community ground. In reaching that finding, it noted the complainant's evidence that, during her visit to the hotel, the staff's demeanour changed when she introduced her fiancé, who was also a member of the Traveller community. The adjudication officer also considered the respondent's refusal to find alternative dates for the wedding, and the failure of the hotel owners to attend or provide evidence to the hearing about the renovation works. He found 'it hard to accept that the hotel ballroom was totally unavailable for some approx. two hundred days prior to the construction starting' and Brief summary: Direct discrimination on the Traveller community ground was at issue in this case concerning the complainant's interaction with a credit union. The complainant, a Traveller woman, required two loan refusal letters to be eligible for a grant for a new mobile home. She visited the respondent's office to request a refusal letter, believing that she was an active member.⁷¹⁵ She gave her details to the receptionist, who told her she would hear back within 48 hours. When no response was received, she returned to the credit union and was informed that her account was dormant and that she would need to reactivate it. The complainant came back later that day with Mr. O'C, a member of a Traveller community development group. A receptionist said she could not give them information on the complainant's application, and they asked to speak to a manager.

A senior manager met with the complainant and Mr. O'C in the public area of the premises. She refused to reactivate the account and issue a letter. According to uncontested evidence, the manager stated that if she acceded to the complainant's request 'they'd all be down looking for one'. Mr. O'C and the complainant understood this as referring to members of the Traveller community. The WRC rejected the respondent's assertion that the manager was alluding to credit union members in general, finding the manager's evidence to that effect unconvincing. In upholding the complaint, the adjudication officer noted that the manager did not bring the complainant into a private consultation room, and that she had shaken hands with Mr O'C but not the complainant. The manager acknowledged that she could have issued the letter but chose not to. No plausible reason was advanced for not doing so.

The WRC concluded that the approach adopted to the complainant would not have been afforded to a person who was not a member of the Traveller community. It directed the respondent to pay EUR 5 000 in compensation.

Brief summary:

In this case a Traveller man argued that he was treated less favourably by the respondent on the gender and Traveller community grounds in applying for social housing. The complainant had been on the respondent's housing list for almost 23 years.⁷¹⁶ His most recent application was provisionally approved and then declined because of alleged anti-social behaviour on the part of his 12-year-old son.

⁷¹⁵ Unlike retail banks, credit unions do not transact with the general public, but only with their members, who are joint owners of the credit union.

⁷¹⁶ Under Irish law, local authorities are required to make a scheme setting out the order of priority to be given to applicants for social housing, known as a housing list: Section 60, Housing Act 1966, <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/eli/1966/act/21/section/60/enacted/en/html#sec60>.

The adjudication officer found there was a lack of transparency in how the respondent had dealt with the complainant and underlined that the application had been denied without the complainant being afforded an opportunity to contest the evidence. The withdrawal of the provisional housing offer was made orally, and the written report of purported anti-social behaviour was not provided to the complainant or to the WRC. The WRC concluded that the complainant was treated less favourably than a settled person would have been in similar circumstances. A prima facie case of gender discrimination was not established.

The respondent was directed to pay the complainant EUR 8 000 in compensation. It was also ordered to engage in a review of the housing allocation scheme to 'achieve Equality Proofing within 3 months of this decision and to implement any recommendations which may follow this review within 6 months of their pronouncement.'

Reference number: ADJ-00021417

Link: <https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/cases/2020/july/adj-00021417.html>

Brief summary: The complainant was a tenant in a house owned by the respondent landlord. She notified the landlord that she was moving out of the premises, and he accepted her offer to find a replacement tenant. A prospective tenant was identified and made an appointment to view the house. Prior to the viewing, the complainant spoke with the respondent by phone and, according to the complainant, in the course of that conversation the landlord said that he did not want tenants who were 'coloured' or from 'Africa or Syria' or 'places like that'. He made further remarks about the 'neighbours not wanting coloured people' and an arson attack on a hotel aimed at preventing asylum seekers from being accommodated there. The prospective tenant (V), an Indian national, visited the house the following day and wanted to move in. When the complainant informed the landlord about V, he asked whether she was 'coloured' and the complainant informed him that she was the same as B, an Indian student who had moved into the house 10 days previously and had not met the landlord. The respondent would not accept V as a tenant, and he issued B with a notice of eviction the following day. The complainant supported B in finding alternative accommodation and sought assistance from various authorities including the Gardaí (police) in trying to prevent the eviction. She was advised that the only course of action open to her was to refer a case to the WRC.

Because of ill health, the landlord did not appear at the hearing to contest the complainant's evidence. He was represented by his son, who had not been party to the conversations at the centre of the complaint. The WRC considered that the complainant's account was credible and was reinforced by a witness, who was a previous tenant and relayed a similar pattern of behaviour on the respondent's part.

The WRC found that the complainant was not subjected to less favourable treatment on the race ground: 'She was accepted as a tenant, she was not evicted, she suffered no detriment on grounds of race, colour, nationality or ethnic or national origins.' However, she was harassed on that ground. The respondent engaged in unwanted conduct related to the race ground 'in expressing racist views' in his conversations with the complainant and evicting a tenant. That conduct had the effect of creating a degrading, humiliating and offensive environment for the complainant, who was awarded EUR 10 000 in compensation.

Brief summary: Harassment and direct discrimination on the sexual orientation ground were at issue in this case taken by a gay man against his former employer. Mr A, a co-worker, repeatedly made disparaging remarks about the complainant's sexual orientation. With the support of his team leader the complainant referred an internal complaint to a manager, who interviewed the complainant, the team leader, another employee (Ms X), and Mr A. The following day, the manager accused the complainant and Ms X of lying. Subsequently and until he left his position with the respondent, the complainant said that he was ignored and isolated by the manager, and the respondent took no measures to address Mr A's conduct. Indeed, Mr A's desk was relocated so that he was sitting directly behind the complainant. Further, the complainant argued that he was treated less favourably than other employees because of the harassment complaint. Specifically, he was subjected to unwarranted criticism, some of which stemmed from Mr A, even though Mr A was not his supervisor or manager, and the complainant's working hours were reduced.

The complainant's evidence was effectively uncontested, since the respondent held no records about the incidents in question. The office concerned had closed, and the staff involved were no longer employed by the respondent.

The WRC considered the complainant's evidence 'very credible', noting that it was corroborated by Ms X, who attended the hearing as a witness. It found that the respondent was liable for harassment on the sexual orientation ground. Mr A had consistently engaged in conduct that amounted to harassment and the respondent could not demonstrate that it had taken any steps to prevent or address the behaviour. The complainant was also subjected to direct discrimination on the same ground. The WRC accepted the complainant's evidence that, following his complaint about Mr A, he had been 'singled out' and reprimanded for supposed work performance issues. However, other staff who experienced similar difficulties were not treated in the same manner, and he alone was selected for a reduction in working hours. Since the treatment was related to the complainant's sexual orientation, it was discriminatory.

EUR 27 000 in compensation was awarded, the equivalent of approximately 18 months' remuneration.

Brief summary: In this case, the High Court considered a challenge to the constitutionality of the procedures that govern the Workplace Relations Commission (WRC). The WRC is the primary forum for determining complaints under Irish anti-discrimination legislation, as well as numerous other employment rights laws.

The case stemmed from employment law proceedings initiated by Mr Zalewski before the WRC. An adjudication officer issued a decision dismissing the claims, even though a full hearing had not taken place. Mr Zalewski commenced judicial review proceedings. The respondents conceded that the WRC's determination was invalid due to an administrative error and agreed to it being set aside. The High Court judgment, therefore, focused on arguments about the constitutionality of the WRC. While Mr Zalewski's complaints were referred under unfair dismissals and payment-of-wages legislation, if successful, his challenge would impact all WRC cases including anti-discrimination law proceedings.

The applicant argued that the powers exercised by the WRC under the Workplace Relations Act 2015 entail the administration of justice. Article 34 of the Irish Constitution reserves that function to the judiciary. Accordingly, the 2015 Act was constitutionally invalid because it conferred judicial decision-making functions on a non-judicial body. Applying previous case law concerning Article 34, the High Court held that, because the WRC cannot enforce its own decisions, it is not engaged in administering justice. A party seeking to enforce a WRC order must bring an application to the District Court and, in defined circumstances, the District Court has the power to alter the form of redress recommended by the WRC. This aspect of Mr Zalewski's challenge failed, and the court also dismissed arguments to the effect that several WRC procedures failed to vindicate the applicant's constitutional rights.

First, Mr Zalewski contended that the Act should require adjudication officers to hold a legal qualification as a matter of principle and that hearings conducted by officers without such qualifications are deficient in practice. The High Court held that it was not necessary for officers of a body such as the WRC to have the type of legal qualifications that are required of people appointed to carry out a judicial function. Based on the evidence presented in the case, the court was not satisfied that the absence of a statutory requirement for adjudication officers to hold a legal qualification resulted in any systemic failure in the determination of claims at the WRC.

Second, the applicant argued that the 2015 Act should require evidence to be taken on oath or affirmation. The High Court found there was no such constitutional requirement. Mr Justice Simons said that it was legitimate for the Oireachtas to consider the disadvantages inherent in complex procedures, and that the informality of hearings before the WRC was beneficial for complainants. He further noted that 'the more informal hearing at first instance is counterbalanced by the right of appeal to the Labour Court. Crucially, the Labour Court is empowered to take evidence on oath' (Para. 177).

Third, the applicant argued that the absence of a statutory right of cross-examination contravened the Constitution. The High Court found that adjudication officers have an implied power to allow cross-examination, although not every claim would require it. If an adjudication officer refused to permit cross-examination where it was warranted, their decision could be judicially reviewed or appealed. The court concluded that the absence of an express right to cross-examine in all cases is not unconstitutional.

Finally, the court rejected the argument that WRC hearings should be heard in public. While hearings are conducted in private, all WRC decisions are published (on an anonymised basis, for the most part). Justice Simons said that the values underpinning the constitutional requirement that justice should be administered in public do not need to be 'read across' to decision-making by non-judicial bodies. Even if one accepted an analogous presumption in favour of public hearings, the court was satisfied that the 2015 Act strikes an appropriate balance. According to the court, 'the desirability of a public hearing must be balanced against the risk that publicity might deter some employees from pursuing a claim' (Para. 207). Publication of the WRC's decisions acts as a check on arbitrary decision-making, while the conduct of hearings in private and non-identification of the parties ensures privacy.

The applicant appealed the High Court's decision and, as at the end of December 2020, the case was pending before the Supreme Court.
